PENSION BILL UP

OTTAWA (CP) — A long-promised government bill to pay an old-age pension to a pensioner's husband or wife between 60 and 65 was introduced Tuesday by Welfare Minister Marc Lalonde.

The bill to amend the Old Age Security Act is designed basically to assist couples now forced to live on one pension.

There now are 1.9 million persons receiving Old Age Security payments, which go to all persons 65 or older. This amendment would apply to about 85,000 spouses whose marriage partners are 65 or older.

BARRETT WILLING TO TAKE LOSS

6% Loans at B.C. Bank

By LINDA HUGHES
Times Staff

Six per cent loans and rates will be offered by British Columbia's new banking institution, Premier Barrett promised Tuesday.

The cheap loans will only be available to low-income people, he said, and the proposed Savings and Trust Corporation of B.C. will be willing to take a loss on those loans.

Low-price mortgages would likely be open to a wider range of people, he said.

His remarks came after the legislature gave second reading, approval in principle, to the bill to establish the new financial institution.

While all opposition members expressed concern about the ultimate role of the new bank, only the three Independent MLAs and two Liberal members voted against second reading. The Socreds and Tories support the bill in principle.

Approval of second reading was accompanied by a loud emotional response from cheering NDP members who stamped their feet and shouted "go, go, go."

Barrett said he could announce the six per cent interest rate for personal loans under $3,000 despite the fact the new corporation will not be in operation for another year.

The cheap loans will be patterned after low-cost loans offered by credit unions recently but, while the credit unions say they have not lost on the loans, the government bank would be prepared to do so, he said.

Under the credit union scheme, the income qualification for low-interest loans was $5,400 for a single person and $8,200 for a family.

If the credit unions agree to be the vehicle for the government's new bank, the corporation will probably have about 14 regional offices, said Barrett.

But if the credit unions do not want to participate in the scheme, the government will have to make new plans which will likely involve more offices and more expenses, he said.

During debate, Independent MLA Pat McGeer (Vancouver-Point Grey) said the bill is just a "hoax" and will not solve the financial problems facing B.C. and other parts of Canada.

The amount of money the government could inject into the system is minimal, he said, and the corporation will have no effect on the runaway inflation plaguing B.C.

McGeer said the legislation is designed to take over the credit unions of B.C. and gives the government the power to destroy any credit union which does not play along with the new bank.

Independent MLA Garde Gardom predicted, however, that in the case of a strike by the corporation's employees economic havoc would be created.

The Vancouver-Point Grey member suggested that individuals hired by the institution should have to accept binding arbitration.

"This will become the largest financial institution in B.C. and if it's closed up for two months the economy will be in severe straits."

The bill is yet another indication, he said, that the NDP is giving itself enormous powers over the province's economy.

Premier Barrett said the corporation is designed to work as a partner with the credit union network, and the government has no intentions of undermining credit unions.

"Credit unions can get vastly increased funds and the partnership will provide additional recognition to the stature of credit unions' reputation."

"Does that sound like a plot?"

Dowding Suspends McGeer

Independent MLA Pat McGeer (Vancouver — Point Grey) was thrown out of the legislature late Tuesday night and suspended from parliamentary activities until Thursday.

MLAs on both sides of the house were shocked when Speaker Gordon Dowding used the legislature's severe form of censure and said: "Patrick Luce McGeer, I name you."

McGeer said later the proceedings "had all the makings of a kangaroo court" and the government had engineered his ejection from the legislature to prevent him from attending a public accounts meeting this morning.

The incident had begun on a rather jovial note, shortly before the house was ready to adjourn at 11 p.m., when McGeer called Resources Minister Bob Williams "cowardly."

Committee chairman Hartley Dent demanded McGeer withdraw the unparliamentary expression and McGeer, egged on by fellow opposition members, withdrew the remark and instead said Williams is "spineless and weak-kneed."

When McGeer refused to withdraw those words without debating the issue and trying to find other more suitable words, Dent called in Dowding.

Dowding asked McGeer three times to withdraw his remarks unconditionally but the MLA kept asking the Speaker to define what he meant by unparliamentary expressions.

Almost before anyone in the house realized the seriousness of the situation, Dowding said he was sorry but had no choice but to name McGeer.

There were shouts of "Oh no" as McGeer picked up his books and walked out of the chamber.

Under the "naming" tradition the government was then required to present a motion of suspension and house leader Eileen Dailly quickly moved that McGeer be suspended until Thursday.

On a formal vote, Tory leader Scott Wallace supported the govenment in approving the suspension and only the Socreds voted against the motion.

There were no other Independents or Liberals in the house to support the ejected member.

Outside the chamber, McGeer said he had no intention of breaking the house rules

Indians' Rail Blockade Costs 120 Sawmill Jobs

VANCOUVER (CP) — An Indian blockade of British Columbia Railway tracks in northwestern B.C. has led to the closure of a sawmill and the loss of up to 120 jobs.

Conrad Pinette, president of Silvacan Resources Ltd., announced the closure Tuesday and described the five-week blockade by members of the Stuart-Trembleur band as "an irresponsible economic action."

The Indians set up the blockade April 28 north of Fort St. James, about 7 miles northwest of Prince George. The band is asking for land and money in return for use of Indian reserve land by the government-owned railway.

Pinette said there have been no trains into Silvacan operations on Takla Lake, 110 miles north of Fort St. James, since the blockade began.

He said the inventory of lumber, railway ties and residual wood chips has made it unrealistic to continue operations. In addition, fuel for heat and power for the mill, bunkhouses and houses is running low.

"The greatest concern to the company and its employees is that the Indians and the government appear unconcerned about the impact on communities isolated by the blockade and no apparent progress has been made toward settling the dispute," Pinette said.

The provincial government has said it will not negotiate land claims until the band removes the blockade.

Pinette said the mill employs about 80 persons. In addition, contract loggers working for Silvacan hire about 40.

Meanwhile, delegates to the annual convention of the B.C. Association of Non-Status Indians voted 129 to 50 Tuesday to join status Indians in rejecting all federal government funding and creating a single Indian political organization in B.C.

Announcement of results of the vote was cut short as delegates leaped to their feet for a standing ovation.

It was the climax of debate which started Monday in which 81 delegates either warned of the effects approval of the motion would have on health and education programs for Indian children, or of the effects disapproval would have in destroying chances for Indian unity and the continued loss of freedom and dignity as a people.

Following the decision to reject funding for the provincial group — individual BCANSI locals can accept or reject funds although most indicated they would reject — delegates instructed the BCANSI executive to meet with the executive of the Union of B.C. Indian chiefs, which represents status Indians, and schedule a combined provincial assembly of the organizations before Sept. 30.

Many of those opposed to the funding motion were women involved in education and health projects. Doris Ronnenberg, candidate for the BCANSI executive, said women, children and the disabled would suffer from the move.

Public Enema No. 1

GLEN ELLYN, Ill. (UPI) — Champaign police served arrest warrants Tuesday on a man suspected of being the "enema bandit" who has terrorized women in the University of Illinois area for the past decade.

The suspect already was being held in the Dupage County Jail in connection with two robberies in Chicago's northwest suburbs.

Champaign police captain John Wilkinson said the latest warrants charged Michael H. Kenyon, 30, in connection with two incidents on May 3, when a man broke into apartments in Champaign and Urbana, robbed three women and gave them enemas.

Champaign police have searched for years for a man who enters apartments and dormitories in the University of Illinois area and forcibly administers enemas to female students.

2 Charged in Death

MONTREAL (UPI — Two men have been charged with murder and other offences following the shooting death of a Montreal dectective in an armed robbery attempt. The two men were taken into custody by the partner of Det. Sgt. Gilles Beauvais, a 17-year veteran of the Montreal Police Force who died in Montreal General Hospital from chest wounds received in a shootout Tuesday night in suburban Ville Emard.

Dockers to Return

MONTREAL (CP) — About 900 longshoremen walked out of a meeting today after telling their union executives they would return to work Thursday. After several hours of heated discussion with union leaders, the men decided to forgo a scheduled secret ballot and voted by acclamation to end a walkout begun Friday.

Nurses Accept Pact

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal government nurses have voted by a narrow margin to accept a unanimous conciliation report recommending average pay raises of 29 per cent in the first year and 10 per cent in the second year of a two-year contract.

10 CONTESTANTS SEEK MR. KAMLOOPS TITLE

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Men here will be able to compete for the title of Mr. Kamloops next month when a group of women hold a pageant to protest the Miss Kamloops contest.

"We're running it seriously and properly but with a sense of humor," Patricia Hughes, women's centre co-ordinator, said in an interview Tuesday.

She said the male contest was prompted by the group's feeling that the Miss Kamloops contest is sexist and exploits the female body.

"Its kind of sickening. We thought surely we're past this and wondered what would happen if we had one for men.

"It's okay for women to parade around in bikinis but men doing this kind of thing is another thing."

There are 10 contestants so far for the July 3 judging, a week after the Miss Kamloops contest.

Lebanese Sniping Breaks Ceasefire

Times News Services

BEIRUT — Random shooting by rooftop snipers and roaming machine gunners broke a ceasefire in several districts of this Lebanese capital today and brought the city its 15th day of civil strife.

The defence ministry said that an army vehicle came under heavy fire in the district of Chiyeh in south Beirut. A corporal riding in the vehicle was hit in the neck by a bullet and taken to hospital.

The shooting broke out after a leader of the mostly Christian National Liberal party was abducted and a Palestinian commando officer was wounded Tuesday afternoon.

Overnight gunfire and explosions gave some quarters of the city a sleepless night. Several major highways were blocked.

Police said the shooting was random and did not result from organized battles.

Beirut had just begun to show signs of returning to normal. Traffic jams developed as thousands of persons clogged shopping centres where some stores opened for the first time in a month.

Joint Palestinian-Lebanese patrols were formed to supervise a ceasefire and remove roadblocks. Premier-designate Rashid Karami urged citizens to "spread flowers where barricades once stood, quit barricades and head for the beaches, dance and kiss on streets."

Meanwhile Israel completed the thinning out of its forces and firepower along the Suez canal front today, a day before Egyptian President Anwar Sadat sails down the waterway to reopen it.

Labor Fed Urges $4 Minimum

BURNABY (CP) — The British Columbia Industrial Relations Board was urged Tueday to raise the provincial minimum wage to $4 an hour by the end of 1975 and to require that employees under 18 receive the same pay as adults.

The proposals were put forward by the B.C. Federation of Labor and several union representatives who appeared before the board at a hearing on minimum wage revision.

The last increase in the B.C. minimum wage went into effect a year ago, bringing the current level to $2.50 an hour for adults and $2.10 an hour for persons 17 and under.

Only Quebec, with minimum wages of $2.60 an hour for adults and $2.40 an hour for children, currently has a higher minimum wage than B.C., although the federal minimum wage and that of the Yukon Territory also will be increasing to $2.60 hourly next month.

The suggestion that employees under 18 should receive the same minimum as adults was endorsed by one employers' group at the hearings.

Don Bellamy, of the Canadian Restaurant Association, said the under 18 provision had been exploited. He said there should be provision for a lower than minimum rate only during a brief training period.

Airport Probe Confirmed

OTTAWA (CP) — RCMP Commissioner Maurice Nadon confirmed Tuesday that a drug investigation is under way at Montreal International Airport.

However, neither he nor Solicitor-General Warren Allmand would confirm or deny a Mountie's allegation that an internal RCMP report contains the names of 60 airport workers being paid off by drug smugglers.

"The release was premature," Commissioner Nadon said as he left Allmand's office late in the afternoon.

Earlier, questions were asked of Allmand in the Commons and more are expected today as the impact of the news story in Tuesday's Toronto Globe and Mail hits home.

Quoting Sgt. Jean Leduc of the RCMP drug squad in Montreal, the story alleges that powerful underworld gangs have corrupted airport workers with payoffs of thousands of dollars and are importing hashish by the ton.

Everything's Normal . . . It's June and Raining

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

June is the cruelest month in Victoria . . . it rains and rains and rains.

"People think of June as being a month of sunshine but it isn't," Victoria's chief forecaster Allan McQuarrie said today.

"It's a month of cloud and drizzle. There's better weather in May and July."

Typically in May there will be occasional fairly hard rainfalls, followed by three days of excellent weather. In June the rain is lighter but the storm stays longer," McQuarrie said.

"Often there are weeks of drizzle just like we are getting today."

The cruelest part is that June is the month tourists begin to flow into the Victoria area in numbers.

And Victorians often select June as the month for an early camping trip. And outdoor sporting events are forever being rained out.

"People should realize that summer, the good weather, doesn't arrive until July."

Over the past 30 years, Victoria has averaged 337 hours of sunshine during July. May on average has 260 hours. People expect June to get some amount between 260 and 337. In fact, June typically has only 256 hours of sunshine because of the frequent cloudy days.

Over the past 30 years, rainfall has been light in July at only .48 of an inch. May rainfall average .74 of an inch. The expectation is that June rainfall will be lower than .74 but a little higher than .48 of an inch.

Instead, it is higher than both, averaging .83 of an inch over the past 30 years.

The number is more significant when it is realized that rainfalls in June tend to be very light — but steady.

In short it is not ideal weather for camping and travel.

"We are not certain why this should be but we have some clues," McQuarrie said.

During the winter, winds come in from the northwest, bringing in storms, some wet, some dry. In the summer, the wind comes from the southwest, bringing in the Hawaiian high pressure ridge that produces hot, dry summer weather.

In June the wind is directly from the west. It moves directly across the Pacific from Japan and by the time it reaches here it is very, very wet.

Stuntman Rides Cable

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — Henri Rechatin, his wife Janyck and motorcycle driver Frank Lucas crossed the churning waters of the whirlpool beneath Niagara Falls by motorcycle on a cable today in a daredevil display for news reporters.

For Rechatin, the feat was the realization of a dream he has held for years. He asked permission to walk a cable across the whirlpool in 1967 but was refused by the Niagara Parks Commission.

In today's demonstration, the three French nationals drove across the greasy pull cable of the Spanish aerocar, the cable car that spans the Niagara gorge.

They didn't wait to ask permission from anyone. At 6:30 a.m., with invited reporters watching, the three set out from the south bank of the whirlpool and slowly drove across the cable, with Lucas at the controls.

Rechatin stood atop the machine on a specially-constructed steel frame and his wife made the trip upside-down, hanging by a foot from another frame underneath.

Rechatin said Tuesday he was in Niagara Falls to prove he is a professional daredevil.

McGEER SUSPENDED

and he simply wanted an explanation of what is to be considered unparliamentary.

The words spineless and weak-kneed have been used in parliaments before, he said, and if there is no precedent for Dowding's decision he should be required to explain it to the house.

He said he was embarrassed for the Speaker and Dowding had simply lost his temper.

The suspension means that McGeer will not be able to attend today's public accounts committee meeting, which will examine the Insurance Corporation of B.C.'s accounts, and McGeer said later it is obvious the government wanted to keep him out of the meeting.

Dowding said the suggestion is ridiculous and he knew nothing of the committee meeting.

He said his decision to throw McGeer out was not a hasty one and he had no other choice when the MLA repeatedly disobeyed the chair. To only throw him out would be meaningless, said Dowding, because the house was ready to adjourn anyway.

It is the second time Dowding has named an MLA. The first was Liberal leader David Anderson, who was named once and ejected five times last spring during the chicken and egg war.

The issue under debate during the uproar Tuesday night was a complicated land deal between Vancouver and the provincial government. McGeer demanded Williams table all the correspondence on the issue and the minister would not make a direct commitment to do so.

Rainy, Rainy June

Similar winds reach here in May but they tend to drop their moisture quickly, leaving behind about three good days (This four-day interval explains how it can be hot during the week and rain every weekend in May).

In June, the storms drop their moisture more slowly. For example, the brunt of the present storm has already moved out over the Prairies. If this were May, Victoria could expect sunshine today, Thursday and Friday.

Instead the forecast is for continuing cloud and drizzle until Friday.

The national weather office at Ottawa is preparing an in-depth weather profile of Canadian provinces to find out more about these patterns with the specific aim of being able to give tourists an idea of when they can normally expect good camping weather.

These studies have been completed for Ontario and the Prairies and B.C. is scheduled to be next.

"However, I think they are shuddering at the thought of trying to do a profile of British Columbia. The weather here is a real challenge."

LISBON FIRE BOMB

A government newspaper blamed a guerrilla group loyal to former dictator Marcelo Caetano, deposed last year in a military coup.

No one was hurt in the blast, which caused a small fire in a toilet adjacent to a modern art gallery in the riverfront fair, a series of booths with exhibits and food halls sponsored by the government for tourists.

Witnesses said the bomb broke some windows and blackened the walls of the toilet, startling the few visitors still at the fair after midnight.

DRUG TRIAL PUT OFF

The trial of a 33-year-old Montreal man on two charges stemming from a major drug seizure in Victoria a year ago was adjourned for the second time in County Court this morning.

Gordon Robert Drainville was remanded to fix a date for his trial, now expected to be held either later this month or early in fall. He is free on bail.

Drainville is accused of possession of the controlled drug methamphetamine (speed) for the purposes of trafficking and trafficking in methamphetamine, both charges laid June 6 following a raid on a room in a downtown hotel in which five pounds of the drug was seized. It was said to have had a street value of more than $500,000.

Prosecutor Michael Hutchison made the motion for the adjournment which was concurred by defence counsel Harold Turnham.

Hutchison told Judge M. L. Drake the crown had reason to believe Drainville would not be able to attend court this morning as he was scheduled to undergo surgery in a Montreal hospital. Turnham said he had a letter from a doctor to that effect.

"I didn't know until this morning he (Drainville) would be here," Turnham told Drake.

Drainville's trial was originally set to start February 27 but the accused changed lawyers at the last moment and Turnham asked for an adjournment to today to prepare his case.

The accused is jointly charged with Dennis Grant Laverty, 23, of 3150 Jutland in the drug seizure.

Laverty's trial was scheduled to begin Monday but was remanded to June 26-27 when he advised court he had changed counsel.

GM Sales Shoot Up

OSHAWA, Ont. (CP) — General Motors of Canada Ltd. reported today its combined ptssenger car and truck sales in May were the second highest of any month in the company's history.

Elk Lake Pumping Threat Seen

The biggest threat to restoring fishery stocks in Saanich waterways is the pumping of 1 million gallons of water a day from Elk Lake by Central Saanich.

If it continues it could neutralize work, helped by federal and provincial government funding.

Ald. John McDonald, chairman of Saanich's environmenkt committee, announced Tuesday 30 students will be employed this summer to work for two months on the municipality's concentrated program to restore Saanich waterways.

Their wages will be paid through a new Community Assistance program, administered by the Victoria Militia District, and made available by a $25,000 grant from the federal government.

McDonald also announced Saanich's environmental advisor Dr. R. W. Langford is waiting for final approval of other federal and provincial government funding.

"Federal funds are to be made available through the fisheries department for salmon and trout enhancement in British Columbia," McDonald reported. He said initial funding will be $4 million in 1975 with more than $300 million involved during a 10-year program.

The students under the militia-administered program, most of whom already have been selected, will start work July 7. Saanich staff will supervise them in the creation of resting pools for large fish in the shallow areas of the waterways, improvement of streambeds, clearing brush and planting shade coverage on the edges of the waterways.

The students will also build a fish-ladder at Beaver Lake and distribute brochures to home-owners along the streams.

But their labors and that of others, Langford warned, would be rendered futile if the large drawoff of water from Elk Lake by Central Saanich is not halted.

"Saanich has to make a stand," Langford cautioned, "Without the summer water we'll lose the Colquitz."

Acting mayor Ald. Sandy Noel, who is also a member of the Greater Victoria water board, suggested a temporary solution to the problem.

He said a surface line could easily be laid along the existing easement between Central Saanich's pumping station on the west bank of the lake and the water board's recently-completed main south of Beaver Lake.

If that were done, Noel said, the Saanich peninsula could be supplied with water, board water, leaving the lake water available for Saanich waterways which usually dry up in the summer.

Compensation Act Change Gives Fishermen Coverage

Commercial fishermen will come under the compulsory protection of the Workers' Compensation Act, under legislation brought down in the legislature Tuesday.

Amendments to the act, introduced by Labor Minister Bill King, comply with the long-standing request of fishermen to have compulsory coverage under the compensation scheme.

Individuals can now apply on their own for coverage under the act, but King said the compulsory inclusion of fishermen will mean lower premium for them and an end to the confusion of employer-employee classifications within the industry.

One of the problems with compensation for workers like fishermen has always been that they do not fall into set molds defining employees and employers, he said.

With the inclusion of fishermen under the act, said King, the province will have to start working with federal authorities to establish safety and other standards for the industry.

The minister said he is still looking at the possibility of also including farm and domestic workers under the protection of the act.

Amendments to the act also allow for upgrading of WCB pensions granted to people prior to 1966 when legislation was passed to add cost-of-living benefits to all subsequent pensions.

Workers still suffering from a compensable disability or awarded a permanent disability from an accident before 1966 can apply for reconsideration of their compensation benefits.

If the WCB decides the worker is not receiving adquate compensation it can be increased so that, if he is under 65, his compensation equals 75 per cent of his projected loss of earnings, or, if he is over 65, it equals 75 per cent of his projected loss of retirement income.

The amending legislation also stipulates that where dependents are receiving payments because of a death of a worker and those payments have not been adjusted with a cost-of-living index, those payments should also be adjusted as of Aug 1, as if there had been cost-of-living increases in the period between Jan. 1, 1966 and July 1, 1974.

NO FREE BUSES

Free bus service in British Columbia could not be handled by the government in the near future, Municipal Affairs Minister Jim Lorimer said Thuesday.

Free buses are a good idea, said Lorimer, especially in the large urban cores, but the government can't do it now or in the "immediate years to come."

Lorimer was asked in the legislature about losses in provincial bus services by Conservative leader Scott Wallace.

Wallace asked if there is a certain occupancy level at which the government decides to remove a bus run from service and Lorimer said, decisions are not made that way.

It's "absolutely necessary," he said, to provide a complete service to people who cannot afford a car.

"We have to take the good with the bad, the peaks with the slow periods," he said "... we have to have a complete service or it's no use."

The government estimates it lost $17 million on public transit last year and will lose more in coming years.

Cancer Program Warning Issued

Health Minister Dennis Cocke has warned women's groups and other organizations that the health department has not endorsed a cancer control program operating in Vancouver.

The promoters under the direction of Dr. Michael T. Richards, of St. Paul's Hospital, have been seeking funds from women's and other groups and telling people they have the endorsation of the government, said Cocke.

But the government will endorse no program until it is fully approved by the B.C. Cancer Control Agency, he said.

Cocke said later he did not want to comment on the expertise of the organization and the question is simply one of assuring the government has fully endorsed the program.

The B.C. Medical Association is looking into the situation now, he said, and the cancer agency will look into endorsing the scheme if it is approached by Richards' organization.

Cocke said it is a highly technical area of medical science and the project would have to be carefully considered.

Interviewed in Vancouver, Dr. Richards said he has never claimed to have either provincial or federal endorsement for his program. He said it was not necessary. He also said he has not solicited funds from any women's group.

Dr. Richards' said his program has nothing to do with any sort of new treatment, but its goal is to gather information on breast cancer that might lead to discovery of its cause.

Backlog Cleared

OTTAWA (CP) — A backlog of more than 25 million pieces of mail in the Montreal post office has been cleared, postmaster-general Bryce Mackasey said Tuesday in the Commons. He said there still is a delay of one week for parcels. Hiring of casual workers to move the mountain of mail touched off disputes in the Montreal post office.

Gas Storage Studied

The provincial government is investigating land in the Lower Mainland for use as an underground storage area for natural gas.

If suitable soil and land is found the government could store large quantities of gas during the summer and prevent shortfalls in U.S. exports during the peak-demand winter periods.

Attorney-General Alex Macdonald said in an interview Tuesday B.C. Hydro is studying geological conditions in the Lower Mainland area, especially around White Rock and Huntington where the natural gas pipeline crosses to the U.S.

Large-scale storage of gas could eliminate the kind of shortfalls in exports that have occurred in the last two winters, said Macdonald.

Actually underground storage would be easily accomplished, said Macdonald, and it would not be dangerous.

A pipe would simply be drilled down through the topsoil and left to sit in the cavernous area below. When the gas was needed again it could easily be pumped back out, he said.

Gov't Paves Way to Drill For Own Natural Gas, Oil

Legislation making it easier for the government to do its own drilling for natural gas and petroleum was introduced in the legislature Tuesday.

Amendments to the Petroleum and Natural Gas Act allow the government to withdraw Crown gas and oil reserves from regular auction and to dispose and develop them as the cabinet sees fit.

It will mean, said Mines Minister Leo Nimsick, that Crown corporations could simply be granted Crown reserves to develop. The lands would not go to regular auction before private companies and the Crown corporations would not have to pay for the right to develop the reserves.

The legislation is permissive and says simply that Crown reserves withdrawn from regular disposition "may be developed, managed or disposed of, or otherwise dealt with, by the minister" under terms and prices laid down by cabinet.

Attorney-General Alex Macdonald said the legislation would also mean the government could grant reserves to private companies, without regular acution, and thus be able to lay down the terms of development.

Both Macdonald and Nimsick said the government has no fixed plans to go into the drilling business but wanted the enabling legislation in case such a decision is made in the future.

"There is no change in policy," said Macdonald.

"The policy is drilling if necessary but not necessarily drilling."

Decisions on government drilling will depend on the outcome of the B.C. Energy Commission's inquiry into natural gas and whether it finds the private oil companies have been performing well, said Macdonald.

Other changes in the legislation allow for the inclusion of oil sands and oil shale products in the definition of petroleum.

A Shoddy Show in Parliament

How easily we are all distracted from substantive issues by a little theatre. Basic questions about the prime minister's office and the privy council's office expenses remain unanswered as the television cameras zero in on John Diefenbaker and Pierre Trudeau. In the House of Commons the former prime minister and the current incumbent go back and forth. Trudeau said Diefenbaker stocked Harrington Lake — the prime minister's summer residence north of Ottawa — with fish for his own pleasure. He later apologized, saying he was misinformed. Charge and countercharge in what passes for debate. Diefenbaker enjoys the spotlight; Trudeau appears to find the whole thing inconsequential and boring.

At issue are some simple facts: In the last 13 years the combined staffs of the PMO-PCO have increased from 92 to 478. The budgets for these two bureaucracies has also increased in the same period from $514,000 to more than $19 million. What is the question here? Are the huge increases in staff and money really necessary or is it the personality contest we are witnessing daily on the floor of the Commons? The answer is self evident in a parliamentary democracy.

Ancillary to the estimates themselves Trudeau refused to allow Privy Council Clerk Michael Pitfield to appear before the standing committee examining the PMO's estimates. When the opposition managed to get these estimates before the full House of Commons Trudeau had House Leader Mitchell Sharp handle the flak. This attitude on the part of the prime minister indicates a contempt for the function of parliament. A disorganized Tory and NDP opposition, more intent on their own leadership problems than parliament, compound the languorous style of this house. What should be an important debate with tough questions and candid answers boils down to a charade, an arena of shallow bickering and petty rhetoric.

The prime minister doesn't seem to understand that he is accountable to the country. By preventing Pitfield from being questioned and turning over his estimates to Sharp he arrogantly circumvents the rights of the opposition. On the opposite side of the house a tarnished hero of the past refurbishes his image with stentorian speeches. The public loves it. The opposition seems powerless to prevent it. The government just laughs. Meanwhile, the questions remain unanswered. Why have the prime minister's estimates increased nearly 28-fold in 13 years? Perhaps there are good reasons. But Trudeau is not going to tell us. The opposition is not going to find out. And the session will end without the Canadian public being any the wiser.

Mother Goose Fights Inflation

Good old Beryl Plumptre, the lady with the mother goose personality who cheerfully announces grim reality in the form of rising food prices. Like a great oracle, secure on Mount Olympus, she keeps shouting down to us that the tide is rising. As we slog through each new wave of inflation, up to our ears in eroded wages, it is a warning which needs no shouting. Ever-bubbling Beryl has now bounced back into national focus with news that Canada's food prices will rise another 15 per cent by the end of the year. If only Plumptre was as good at defending our dream as she is at documenting our demise. No such luck, of course. We are now informed that her board will monitor food prices on a weekly basis, trends to be made public on the fourth Friday of each month. It simply means we will get the bad news on a regular basis rather than intermittently as before. We can hardly wait for the first exciting report.

The distasteful aspect of this futile exercise in public relations is that Beryl is powerless. Her food prices review board is as limp as the taxpayer's pocketbook. It dithers; documents and divines like an alchemist in search of the philosopher's stone. Even the alchemist achieved more hopeful results. Canadians have grown tired of this shuck and jive statistical show from the Trudeau administration. It was an insult to their intelligence in the first place. The government has a chance to redeem itself in this month's budget. Meanwhile, the food prices review board should turn into a pumpkin.

W. A. WILSON

Opposition Timid, Gentlemanly

OTTAWA — The Conservatives' attempt to apply the most respected tradition of parliamentary government, the right of the House of Commons to judge and control administration spending, led to one of the shabbiest episodes of this Parliament.

It began with the Tory determination to have a proper look at the spending of two rapidly growing departments, the prime minister's office and the privy council office, now both vastly enlarged both in staff and spending from their lean and spartan days under Mackenzie King, St. Laurent, Diefenbaker and Pearson.

The government began to manoeuvre like a slippery eel — not just one wet with sea-water but coated in oil as well — to put the opposition down. This seemed to be the purpose — a put-down — rather than any fear that there were things best hidden. There may be, but it is a fair bet that if there are unhappy secrets about the PCO this opposition has no clue what they might be.

Bad Performance

In the end, by using an opposition day when they can set the business of the house, the Conservatives seemed to have backed the government into a corner from which they could only emerge by being straight-forward. Falling back on the methods of arrogance, contempt for valuable institutions and plain old-fashioned trickery, the Liberals set out ruthlessly to depreciate Parliament's values.

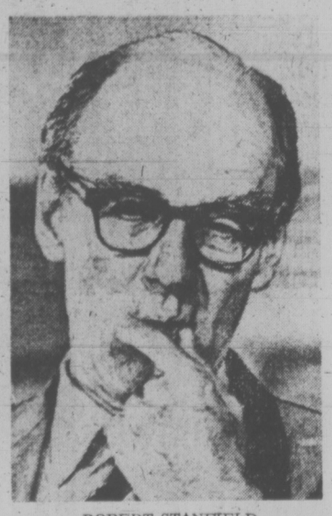
The motives still seemed to be, not concealment, but sport, a return to the halcyon days of Trudeaumania and the contemptuous denunciations of the opposition as "nobodies."

It was not until days later 79-year-old John Diefenbaker rose to deliver a brilliant rebuke, simultaneously cutting and amusing, that the parliamentary balance began to be redressed. It was a worthy performance, reflecting Diefenbaker's 35 years in parliament. His stylishness as a parliamentarian left him well above the sheer grubbiness of the Liberal performance a few days earlier, as much above that as above the pedestrian performances of his own colleagues.

Diefenbaker did more than just reply to a government performance so bad that some of the Liberal backbenchers were left feeling resentment towards their leadership. The old Conservative warrior reminded everyone how essential effective opposition is to the proper functioning of our system of government. Without it, everything begins to run downhill, with complacency and self-satisfaction replacing eagerness and good performance.

Very few men in government seem able to operate at top pitch without the stimulus of opposition. In this parliament there are only three — John Turner, Bryce Mackasey and Jean Chretien.

Perhaps it is because each faces such heavy problems that they seem able to keep their standard of performance up. Warren Allmand comes close at times, because he is honest and gutsy, and Eugene Whelan still has a lot going for him as agriculture's spokesman. But the other ministerial performances are vitiated by power and freedom from effective opposition. The erosion of performance seems to have started at the top in this government. The prime minister himself is the biggest victim of indifferent opposition.



ROBERT STANFIELD
. . . letting government manoeuvre

Diefenbaker's performance, which ended with him sensibly reserving his final salvoes for the prime minister's return, made anyone who cares for Parliament wish that it were possible to have him back for just a month with his full ferocity of 1963-64.

The worst single result of the last election was the decision by the voters to replace David Lewis, a brilliant parliamentarian, by Mrs. Ursula Appolloni, whose contribution to the House of Commons is not conspicuous. Democracy has rarely made a worse bargain.

Robert Stanfield continues to project the image of decency which makes him such an appealing person but he is not an effective opposition leader. The Conservatives should know by now that they cannot trust the Liberals, yet, when they finally had the prime minister's estimates in the house for examination, they amiably allowed themselves to be outwitted. Trudeau had plans for a political foray into southern Ontario and wanted to get away early so the Tories were gentlemen and let him speak first. He did — endlessly, in a rambling, time-killing speech that went on for an hour and a half. The surprised Conservatives had expected a 15-minute opener.

If Stanfield is simply too nice a man to be a good opposition leader, Ed Broadbent of the New Democrats suffers from the same failing. Like the Conservative leader, he shows every sign of being a thoroughly nice fellow. The great merit of David Lewis and John Diefenbaker was that, whatever other adjectives men might apply to them, no one was ever heard calling either of them "a nice man."

Petty and Vindictive

As examples of what goes wrong with opposition in this parliament, there are two or three current cases. The mess that is unfolding over Vietnamese immigration was totally predictable and, indeed, was predicted. It was obvious that the Saigon regime was going to disgorge some very unsavory people looking for bolt-holes and that a serious effort would be needed to sort the wheat from the chaff if we did not want the torturers, assassins and embezzlers along with the legitimate refugees. But the opposition did not mount any early effort to push a minister like Robert Andras up to scratch. By contrast, though, we see western Tories demanding that the civil rights of accused in west coast narcotics cases should be suspended.

There is a good deal that is unattractive in Pierre Trudeau's style these days, from the lack of leadership, through the banana republic security to the lavish spending. What we get from the opposition, though, is Tom Cossitt's mean, petty and vindictive campaign with its anti-French overtones.

This is simply not serious opposition and there is a depressingly long time to wait.

Worthy Doctor

My letter concerns the brief article entitled Witness Admits $200 Abortion which appeared in the May 30 edition of the Times. According to this article, a 20-year-old female witness has testified at the trial of Dr. Henry Morgentaler that when she visited his clinic some two years ago to procure an illegal abortion, the worthy doctor asked her for a payment of $200. Surely your newspaper has misprinted the sum of money involved. It is impossible to believe that our great "humanist of the year 1975" could have charged a 17-year-old girl so exorbitant a fee for half an hour's work. — Barry F. Beardsmore, 2594 Beach Drive.

Depreciating Values

For three days I have been in Victoria, for a necessary vacation; the strain of being a fellow American has been very difficult within my neighborhood, of late.

Here, in Victoria, a beautifully clean city with active human beings, the strain has been corroborated to me directly. The people who have spoken to me are hospitable, unaffected and directly honest. Several persons including a bank teller explained to me the rate of exchange: American bills are okay plus six cents. American coins are equivalent to Canadian coins, therefore okay. In America, Canadian coinage is garbage and Canadian bills are not okay. I have an American quarter for coffee this evening and am ashamed to spend it. Tomorrow my quarter could be worth 26 cents, 25¼ cents or 24½ cents ,give or take two cents plain, 1-3 here and-or 1-19 there.

Each exchange of small change communicates depreciation of values either American or Canadian. Gentlemen, the United States has alienated herself from peoples and individuals at a time by our rhetorical coinage (AKA: coined rhetoric) with no sustained maintenance except the two cents plain which doesn't buy a cup of coffee. — Mrs. Lila Waggoner, San Francisco.

I wish to protest very strongly against the proposal made in the legislature regarding the removal of coin boxes on public toilets.

As a woman, I would very much prefer to pay my dime, and have at least a fair chance of finding a clean one, especially as in any rest room I have ever been in, there are far more free toilets than pay ones.

Sincere Thanks

The British Columbia and Yukon Division of the Canadian Cancer Society are once again experiencing a wonderful response to our 1975 Conquer Cancer Campaign.

Communities large and small, throughout Greater Victoria, Vancouver Island and the mainland, are reporting returns exceeding all previous years.

In these times of economic unrest, financial uncertainty and continued inflation, we at the society are extremely grateful, and deeply indebted, to those behind the scenes who make it all happen.

May I therefore extend my very sincere and deep appreciation to the people responsible for our success:

● Radio, newspapers and television, for their continual year round use of publicity materials issued through our offices. The printed word, the personal interviews, and visual presentations, provided the society at absolutely no cost, are invaluable, enabling us to create a constant public awareness of our existence, requirements, and services. Without this exposure we would have an uninformed public, and we would be practically unknown.

● Our volunteer unit members throughout the province and Yukon, key personnel who are the representatives of the society in the various communities, who organize and conduct such a vigorous programme on our behalf. The thousands of volunteers who respond to the Unit requests for assistance in canvassing the communities to raise funds, and provide educational and patient services as required. These people are the Cancer Society, giving their time and effort freely for a common cause.

● To the many groups, clubs, organizations, and fraternities, young and old alike, who contribute to our work both financially and-or physically, in recognition of the fact that cancer is everyones problem.

Yes, cancer is everyone's problem, and the foregoing is a tribute to your ever-growing concern.

We are proud to have you on our side. Thank you, one and all, for an excellent job. — Wilfred W. A. Burton, Executive Officer, Vancouver Island Branch, 857 Caledonia Avenue.

Immigrants All

In the Times of May 29 there appeared a report in which an Indian spokesman claimed that immigrants to North America "have been raping, destroying and killing since the days of Columbus."

It has been pointed out in one of the provincial museum publications that everyone alive in North America today, including native Indians, is either an immigrant or the descendant of immigrants. If this be true then Indians must also be guilty of "raping, destroying and killing."

From an historical point of view there are numerous incidents of Indians raiding one another in their inter-tribal warfare and murdering and enslaving their unfortunate victims. As a matter of fact, Indians on the west coast still engaged in the abominable practice of slavery long after it had been abandoned by Europeans.

We hear much these days of Indian claims to "justice." I wonder if, in pre-contact days, victorious Indians thought of justice towards the vanquished? Or did any of the defeated tribes present "land claims" to their foes? Europeans through the centuries have had to endure defeat, both military and economic. Yet Europeans did not go about whining and crying, they simply made the best of what they had and pulled themselves up by their own bootstraps.

Perhaps Indians might consider the value of this approach instead of going in for such childish acts as blocking public roads and sloshing paint on the war memorial. — Ross Leighton, 1051 Hampshire Road.

Fundamental Rights

I am referring to an item in your May 28 edition, Scott Wallace's "warning" about the justification of euthanasia.

In a free society where every individual has fundamental rights as to the way he or she wants to live and even the choice of his or her own funeral rituals, the right to die should not be denied to any person who freely declares his or her will not to accept the horrors that relate to physical or mental deterioration.

Any individual, while in good health, should be granted the right to the choice to decide whether or not he or she wants to die without enduring the prolonged suffering of a terminal illness, the dreadful humiliation of being fed, bathed, cleaned and kept under medications which will only delay his or her flight into eternity.

A medic-alert bracelet should be worn by those who have made their own will to die, and neither the state, nor the medical profession, nor well-meaning relatives or friends should interfere in this matter. — E. J. Lattes, 503—548 Dallas Road.

Excess Drinking

Prohibitionists wrong? Maybe, but because I disagree with the new proposed B.C. liquor law doesn't mean I'm a prohibitionist.

Statistics have proved that more people are drinking in excess, than ever before and more accidents and problems are the result. The legal age was lowered a while back, now the laws will make it easier to buy liquor and to drink more in some public places. Most people are not list shoppers, so the more they see, the more they will buy.

It isn't only minors or teenagers who get drunk. Many of all ages drink beyond their limit. I realize that drinking is here to stay, but do we have to encourage it? I feel that the new laws, if passed, are going to make a bad thing worse. — Mrs. Elsie Kerr, Duncan, B.C.

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of June 4, 1915

CALGARY — Thousands of Germans in Canada and hundreds of thousands in the United States are awaiting the word to rise and help in the final crushing of Britain about the end of July or the beginning of August, according to confidences unexpectedly imparted to a German-speaking Scotsman by a naturalized German farmer in the Calgary district. Rayhold Hordan, who was arrested last night by the city police on a charge of sedition, was in the city on business connected with his farm. He entered into conversation with a man in a hotel whom he saw reading a German newspaper and who had a distinctly Teutonic appearance. He boasted to the stranger that towards midsummer, Germans all over North America would rise and help crush Britain. He said the Germans in Canada could do a great deal of damage and pointed out that 250 men could destroy Calgary.

Not Everyone Shares In Venezuela Oil Boom

By MARVINE HOWE
New York Times

CARACAS, Venezuela — "What has happened to the oil money?" people ask in the hillside slums that hover over this affluent petroleum capital.

"We have seen nothing good from the petrodollars — only the rise in the price of milk and meat, more delinquency, shortages of schools and hospitals," says Sister Aura Delia Goncalez, a Roman Catholic nun who led a delegation of slum dwellers to ask the governor "for what belongs to us."

Keenly aware of the growing disillusion, the governor of Caracas, Diego Arria, 36, recently spent four days in the western parish of La Vega. The quarter of a million inhabitants there are mostly without regular jobs or means of livelihood. He received hundreds of petitioners who brought complaints, visited tin and cardboard shacks, and brought hope with promises of paved roads, water, schools, athletic fields and police protection.

Venezuela, the world's third largest oil exporting country and leading supplier to the U.S., earned some $10 billion last year but is having trouble funneling the benefits of the oil revenue to the majority of her 1.2 million people.

President Carlos Andres Perez and his Democratic Action Party, who won an impressive majority a little over a year ago, have constantly proclaimed high ideals for a redistribution of the national wealth and drawn up many sound development programs. But progress has been limited.

"Our main bottleneck is the lack of administrative capability," says a Democratic Action Party militant. "We have brilliant leaders and good workers but the problem is the channels."

Meanwhile the gap between the rich and the other people is broadening. Businessmen complain about the government's "socialist" tendencies. But they continue to make 35 per cent profit and spend their weekends on private yachts or the golf courses in Miami. Wealthy cattle ranchers live in Caracas suburbs and fly to their farms on weekends in their private planes. Art galleries are prospering, as are French boutiques and the luxury shops.

Importers are flying Cadillacs in from Miami despite the recent 350-per-cent duty on large U.S. built cars. The importers say "business is better than ever in status symbols."

"But the poor are poorer and life is harder for the middle class," says German Carias, author of a recent book, Unemployment and the Structural Crisis. He estimates that about 2.8 million people are unemployed or underemployed and have enjoyed no benefits from oil revenue. He points to such "signs of desperation" as the rise in violent crime, the spread of gambling on horses and lotteries and new protests against high living costs.

And there are the people who flocked to see Gov. Arria in La Vega. Georjina Trejo de Fernandes, a 56-year-old woman whose hands and feet are twisted with arthritis and whose husband has been unable to find work for a year, said: "There are free hospitals in Caracas but not enough beds." She asked the governor to help her to be hospitalized and for aid to send her 8½-year-old son to school.

There was Rodolfo Angora, a 22-year-old high school graduate with a pregnant wife and no training who said he couldn't find a job. "The state should open factories, give us work," he said. "They can't end the delinquency with so much hunger and unemployment."

In his first year, President Perez flooded the country with decrees and rulings intended to give Venezuelan masses a share of the country's new wealth. There were wage increases, price controls and a minimum wage set in agriculture.

Lately he has ruled that companies with more than 10 employees must increase their payrolls and automobile companies must produce a certain number of popular-priced cars. And now there are plans for a major income tax reform. But a 20-per-cent rate of inflation has eaten up many advantages and lack of official control has nullified others.

The government's most widely applauded decision was to nationalize basic resources, although this has not brought any concrete benefits yet. The U.S.-owned iron mines were taken over by an amicable agreement at the end of last year. Within a few months the oil industry will be nationalized.

The government has launched major development programs in industry and agriculture, but they have been slow in getting under way.

The government's ambitious program for the modernization and diversification of industry is scheduled to get under way soon.

All these development plans may not have any impact on the slum dwellers of La Vega but they have opened lucrative opportunities to foreign business. Hotels and airlines are crowded with people who want to sell anything from Boeing jets and tanker fleets to Miami real estate.

U.S. exports to Venezuela reached a record level of $1.8 billion for 1974, according to the U.S. department of commerce and it is predicted that the figure will be exceeded this year.

American, Italian, French, German and British representatives are competing here to get a share of Venezuela's $300 million airport modernization program.

The most controversial new development plan is the aeronautics industry. Venezuela buys 2,000 aircraft a year and so has decided to produce her own. This has given rise to open protests and the latest joke: "What we'll have to do is to sell our aircraft to Columbia — and then declare war."

ATOM MAYHEM

COMMONWEAL

In military parlance, "broken arrow" is the term for a military accident involving a nuclear weapon. The Pentagon has acknowledged 17 such accidents, although little is known publicly about six of them. Barry Schneider capsulizes the other five in the current Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists:

1. Aircrash over Palomares, Spain. On Jan. 17, 1966 an American B-52 bomber collided with a KC-135 refueling tanker causing the deaths of five crewmen and the dropping of 4 hydrogen bombs which were recovered after an intensive ground and sea search. Radioactive leakage and conventional explosions occurred in the area.

2. Bomb Accidentally Dropped over South Carolina. On March 11, 1958 a B-47 bomber accidently dropped a nuclear weapon in the megaton range over Mars Bluff, South Carolina. The conventional explosive "trigger" of the nuclear bomb detonated leaving a crater 75 feet wide and 35 feet deep. One farmhouse was obliterated.

3. Bomarc Missiles Burned in Fire. On June 7, 1960, a fire a McGuire Air Force Base led to a series of shattering explosions and the destruction of one of 56 nuclear-armed Bomarc missiles. While no nuclear explosion occurred there was a small amount of radioactive leakage creating a temporary health hazard.

4. 24-Megaton Bomb Safety Devices Sprung. In 1961 a near catostrophe occurred at Goldsboro, N.C., when a B-52 bomber had to jettison a 24-megaton bomb. Five of the six interlocking safety devices were set off by the fall. A single switch prevented the bomb from exploding, an explosion which would have been over 1,800 times more powerful than the Hiroshima bomb.

5. Greenland Air Crash Scatters Plutonium. On Jan. 21, 1968 a B-52 attempting an emergency landing at Thule Air Force Base, Greenland, crashed and burned on the ice of North Star Bay. The high explosive components of all four nuclear weapons aboard detonated producing a plutonium-contaminated area of at least 300-400 feet wide and 2,200 feet long.

Schneider presents these details in arguing that most U.S. tactical weapons be brought home and most of them retired. There would be no loss in national security, he comments, but rather a net gain in security as the chances decrease for accidents, for theft, and for unauthorized use of the weapons."

On the latter point, he estimates that about 120,000 persons — including NATO allies, security guards, scientists at weapons labs, shipyard and arsenal workers — have access to the 30,000 U.S. nuclear weapons and to weapons-grade fissionable material. What happens if someone in a crucial position goes haywire? Schneider notes that recently 3,647 persons with access to nuclear weapons were removed from their jobs during a single year for such reasons as mental illness, alcoholism and drug abuse.

Anyone Can Make a Bomb

TORONTO STAR
An Editorial

Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau argues that Third World countries shouldn't be given nuclear technology to help solve their urgent energy problems unless they show a better understanding of the dangerous temptations that nuclear technology opens up.

External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen also promises that Canada won't aid any country that might produce "any nuclear explosive device for whatever purpose."

This avowed attempt to stop the uncontrolled spread of nuclear arms may be well-meaning but it smacks of rhetoric for moralistic consumption. In any case it is completely unrealistic.

In theory, any country that gets technological aid only wants it for peaceful purposes. But the margin between "peaceful" and "aggressive" technology is slim. Once the basics are in operatin, coversion is a small step.

Even if the Third World countries agreed to Canada's terms, they still remain often under pressure from shaky economies, belligerent neighbors and teetering governments. A nuclear power staton in the hands of one leader may be a weapons centre after a military coup.

Those are the problems of bilateral agreements. But it's equally unlikely that Canada can do anything effective to control nuclear proliferation in a world where it's getting steadily easier.

As United Nations secretary general Kurt Waldheim has said, no safeguards can stop the spread of nuclear knowledge at this stage.

Any country with basic technology and funds can develop a bomb. A book recently published by an American former nuclear scientist shows how atomic bombs can be built in a basement, from information that is publicly available.

But a country that has a bomb also has to have a delivery system. Which means importing systems available on the arms trading market to all bidders. Both the West and the Communist bloc are making millions from arms sales, and there is no way of putting a stop to the trade.

The Canadian government should keep that in mind when it talks about cutting off nuclear dealings.

By stopping aid and trade—notably the reliable and relatively safe-operating CANDU reactor — Trudeau would not be halting the rising tide of nuclear danger. What he would be doing is refusing help to countries that badly need nuclear energy for domestic development, and to close the economic gap left by last year's oil price increases.

Trudeau's talk about limiting the nuclear arms race dates back to the time of the Nuclear Club, when a few large powers kept each other in check through a monopoly on bomb technology.

That's no longer the case. The bomb is within reach of many small countries. And if they can't agree on mutual survival instead of nuclear destruction, Canada's disapproval won't hold them back.

Humping It in Manhattan

russell baker

After moving to Manhattan I bought a camel. I did not want a camel, but in Manhattan it was absolutely vital to own an animal of some sort, and of all the animal kingdom a camel seemed to me the most sensible sort to own.

It is peaceable, requires infrequent feeding, affords basic transportation and makes very little noise. If one must have an animal in a place like Manhattan, and it seemed that one must, a camel seemed the least troublesome choice. So I bought a camel.

This did not sit well with New Yorkers. New Yorkers are partial to dogs, which they harbor in all sizes and shapes, keeping them imprisoned most of the day in tiny apartments and bringing them out morning and evening to evacuate on sidewalks and streets.

The dogs vary from mammoth beasts capable of consuming a policeman in three bites to creatures no larger than mice, and come in a startling variety of forms.

There is one breed that resembles a woman's wig. The first time I saw one at the curb on Second Avenue, I undertook to retrieve it for its owner, mistaking it for an escaped wig, before I discovered that it had four legs and was being walked.

At that time I had no animal at all and New Yorkers viewed me with that distaste which the animal lover cannot conceal for the beastless man. When the camel was delivered, I looked forward with satisfaction to the approving smiles they would shed upon us both — me and my camel — at the spectacle of man and beast in harmonious communion.

This approval was never granted. To the contrary. There was undisguised hostility toward the camel. The landlord, who kept a pair of boxers big enough to kick a camel to death, protested the camel's size.

The neighbors complained that the camel, which at first I kept at the curb, took up a precious parking space, and I soon had to bring him into the apartment, which depressed both of us — the camel because he couldn't get comfortable on the couch, me because the camel kept wandering into the dining room at the dinner hour and wolfing the salad.

Walking the camel put strains on neighborly relations. In Manhattan, the custom is to walk your animal around the corner or into the next block and pretend to be studying a distant horizon while he surreptitiously fouls someone else's turf.

New Yorkers understand this about dogs and make no protest. They live by the dog owner's code. You foul my shoes; I foul yours. But the sight of a poor camel ambling around the corner to do as the dogs do incensed them.

The owners of the neighborhood's fiercer man-eating mastiffs would threaten to unleash their pets on the camel if he persisted in using the asphalt sacred to canines.

I saw that I was not winning New Yorkers with my love of animals and that they thought me eccentric for not preferring a dog that looked like a wig, a giant hound that could tear the mailman to shreds or even a cat that would claw the furniture to ribbons.

Determined to gain their respect, I tried to teach the camel tricks of the sort that captivate dog lovers. I attempted to teach the camel to howl in the night, but that was useless.

I did succeed, however, in teaching him to leap enthusiastically against arriving visitors and slobber over their neckties. I even trained him to issue something that sounded vaguely like a menacing growl, suggesting that he was preparing to sink his teeth into the thigh of any guest heartless enough not to be a totally devoted camel lover.

I taught him to wag his tail and, with one bound across the room, pounce happily into the lap of anyone who was elegantly dressed. And when he had mastered all these endearing tricks, I invited neighbors to visit.

The camel performed faithfully, although he was clearly bored and thought that humans must be an asinine bunch to require such arch displays from beasts. The neighbors were not warmed.

The man on whose necktie the camel slobbered lost his temper; the woman at whom the camel growled menacingly left, threatening to have me before the magistates for harboring an unleashed camel.

The man in whose lap the camel triumphantly pounced with wagging tail has filed a suit claiming pain and suffering.

The camel, whose sensitivity was at least as great as the average dog's, was crestfallen at our failure to win the neighbors' affection and respect. I was quite touched by his despondency, so much so, in fact, that I hesitated to get rid of him after the fiasco.

Accordingly, I made him an offer. With surgical removal of the identifying hump, I suggested, he could easily pass for a dog in the bizarre pound that was New York, and immediately win the heart of all Manhattan. The camel had nothing to lose except his hump, and shortly afterward New Yorkers were delightedly letting him nuzzle their neckties and void thunderously on their doorsteps.

I sold him to a dog lover for a very good price, never having believed that a city is a fit place to keep a dog.

After an extraordinary item — the write-down of $257,337 or advances to an unconsolidated subsidiary, Churchill Copper Corp. Ltd. — Brameda had a net loss in the latest period of $152,532 or 1.6 cents a share.

Agreement in principle has been reached that grants Brascan Resources Ltd. an extension of the option on the Sukunka Coal licences in B.C. held by Brameda, president R. E. Hallbauer said in the interim report.

Brascan asked for the extension to complete its most recent feasibility study and to complete financing, marketing and other arrangements.

Allarco

Allarco Developments Ltd. reports first-quarter earnings of $447,000 or 32 cents a share compared with $181,000 or 13 cents per share for the same period last year.

Sales for the three months exceeded $16 million, up from the $12.5 million figure in 1974.

Rivtow Straits

Rivtow Straits Ltd. has reported a net profit for 1974 of $935,000, up $258,000 from the previous year.

Earnings for 1974 do not include a net profit of $290,000 recorded by the Whittier group, which merged with Rivtow during the year.

Westburne

Westburne International Industries Ltd. of Calgary, Canada's largest oilwell drilling company, has reported record earnings for the fiscal year ended March 31.

Net earnings before preferred dividends and minority interests amounted to $10,474,000, up from $5,910,000 for the year ended March 31, 1974. Net earnings applicable to common shares were $9,378,000 or $3.01 per share, an 87-per-cent increase over the amount of $5,004,000 or $1.61 for the previous year.

Operating revenues during the year increased by 32 per cent to $310 million from $235 million.

Recession: Worst of 2 Worlds

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

It would be foolhardy for Canada to deliberately provoke a recession while the U.S. economy is moving in the opposite direction, says Toronto economist Wayne Clendenning.

The result, he said, would be the worst of both worlds: Canada would have unemployment across the country and at the same time would be importing inflation from the United States.

Canada has little choice but to continue to promote an expansionist economy in its budget June 23, he said in a report prepared for Richardson Securities of Canada.

At the same time, some form of direct or indirect wage and price contols could be brought in.

This would mean that inflation would continue to be the main economic problem but the rate of inflation might be fairly stable.

The government is in the best position in years to bring in some form of controls if it decides to follow that approach, Clendenning said.

Wages and other costs are rising at a much higher rate than in the U.S. and at the same time consumer demand is weak in this country at the moment.

(In addition, the next federal election is some three years away.)

"It seems then that the federal government will very seriously consider the imposition of compulsory price and income controls in the forthcoming budget and the chances of them actually doing so would seem greater than at any time in the past few years."

Canada really only has three choices, he said.

— It can do nothing and hope U.S. wages and other costs catch up with Canadian increases in the next two years.

— It can bring in restictive measures to reduce inflation and provoke a recession.

The fact the government has been attempting to get voluntary wage restraints indicates it is not happy with the do-nothing approach.

The second choice, to provoke a deeper recession, would be foolhardy. If the government is going to act decisively it will have to follow the third approach, he said.

One important consideration impelling the government to act is not simply the question of inflation versus recession but the economic prospects if wages continue to skyrocket in this country.

High wage costs not only make Canadian exports less competitive but probably more importantly result in much greater import penetration in Canadian markets. More U.S. goods will be purchased in this country and Canadian producers will suffer.

The whole manfacturing structure of the nation could be undermined unless Canada maintains a competitive price structure. Otherwise the nation will return to the state of being hewers of wood, drawers of water, exporting only raw materials.

High wage rates here would also discourage further U.S. investment in Canada.

Canadian wages have traditionally been lower than in large U.S. urban centres. However, labor militancy and the fact public servants can strike in this country has tended to close the gap quickly.

Clendenning says Canada's long-term interests will best be served by having Canadian wages slightly below those prevailing in the U.S.

It may take some kind of wage (and price) control program to achieve this, he says.

SAANICH STEP CLOSER TO DESTROYING DOGS

Saanich moved another step closer Tuesday to obtaining permission for members of its police force to shoot and destroy dogs caught attacking humans or domestic animals.

The finance, legislative and health committee recommended Monday that Saanich ask the provincial government to be given powers under the Domestic Animal Protection Act.

Chairman Mel Couvelier said he had been informed there would be no problem in getting permission to have the municipality covered by municipality covered by the act, which normally is in force in unorganized areas, not municipalities.

The committee will also ask municipal staff to recommend an appropriate scale for compensation which would be paid to owners of domestic animals destroyed by vicious dogs if the dogs' owners cannot be traced.

"If we charge a licence fee the money could be a pool for a compensation fund," Ald. Joe Bourque said. "There should be some reasonable measure of comenstation."

Couvelier cautioned that when rabbits, chickens or other domestic animals are killed by dogs they always become "blue ribbon animals" when compensation is sought.

The committee agreed the scale of compensation and ceilings on the total amount of any compensation fund should be set.

Queen to Nigeria

LONDON (Reuter) — Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip will visit Nigeria Oct. 14-23, Buckingham Palace announced Tuesday. The Queen was last in Nigeria in 1956. Gen. Yakubu Gowon, Nigerian head of state, visited London in June, 1973.

School Pool, Theatre Favored

Saanich parks and recreation committee was told Tuesday that 75 per cent of the residents living near the Spectrum Community School on Carey would like to have a swimming pool and theatre at the school and would be willing to pay extra taxes to get them.

Doug Vincent, spokesman for the community studies 11 class at the school, said a telephone canvass had contacted 180 homes in the area. A total of 76 per cent were in favor of the pool and 60 per cent, the theatre.

Ald. Roy Wootten, however, said, "The biggest area (in the canvass) is outside Saanich."

The committee, also, was in favor of such facilities as swimming pools being located in schools. Members felt, however, school boards should finance their construction.

"It's a damn shame school boards don't see the need for financing these facilities in schools," observed Ald. Joe Bourque.

Municipal administrator Bill Tremayne replied, "School boards are only allowed certain facilities. This points out the weakness of (provincial) legislation." He and the committee agreed pools located in schools would probably receive more use than in other public areas.

"The school board could possibly qualify for (provincial) community recreation grants," recreation director Bill Young said, "There's no doubt a pool added to the school would be heavily used."

Young pointed out, however, that public swimming pools already in operation were not being used to full capacity.

A swimming pool at the school was included in the referendum that was defeated when it went before Saanich taxpayers.

"We did go to referendum," chairman Ald. Fred Severson told the students, "and 54 per cent said they didn't want it."

Fieldhouse Addition Offer

The Dolphin Football Association has offered to build a two-room, two-storey addition to the Copley Park fieldhouse at no expense to Saanich.

The addition would be used by the association as a teaching and committee meeting area during the football season and made available to the rest of the community in other months.

The building would become the property of Saanich.

An association spokesman told Saanich's parks and creation committee Tuesday the organization would also install electric heating throughout the building.

On the suggestion of Ald. Roy Wootten, members of the Northridge Ratepayers Association who live in the area, will be informed of the proposed extenison.

Endorsing the extension proposal in principle, the committee recommended that the extension be made, using a split level treatment to lower the proposed 22-foot height shown in the original plans.

The spokesman agreed to produce modified plans June 16.

Meanwhile, recreation director Bill Young, municipal administrator Bill Tremayne and parks administrator Frank Andres will meet with the association officials to advise how the group can apply for one third of the costs through the provincial government's Community Recreation Facilities Fund.

Festive Atmosphere For Suez Opening

CAIRO (UPI) — Three Suez Canal cities of Port Said, Ismailia and Suez City took on a festive air today and new coats of paint for the gala reopening Thursday of the Suez Canal, closed since the 1967 Six Day War.

President Anwar Sadat will board the Egyptian destroyer October 6 with Crown Prince Reza of Iran and other dignitaries and order a convoy of five ships flanked by missile boats to proceed up the canal.

The vessels will pass more than 100 fishing boats decked out with pennants, Egyptian and Iranian flags, sailors and bands and slip under an arch of triumph 360 feet long and 75 feet high, and the canal will be re-opened.

Another ceremony has been planned at the halfway point in Ismailia Thursday night.

Two hours behind Sadat's entourage the first convoy of toll-paying ships will sail to Suez City that night.

For the past week, teams of Egyptian men and boys have been applying fresh coats of paint to practically everything in Port Said, Ismailia and Suez City.

The ceremony took on an added dimension with the Israeli announcement it would reciprocate Egypt's decision to open the canal by pulling back half its soldiers and tanks and all cannons and non-antitank missiles from its Sinai front lines.

OTTAWA SITS ON OIL MOVE

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government probably will decide sometime this week its next step in negotiations with the provinces over higher petroleum prices.

Energy Minister Donald Macdonald said Tuesday that individual meetings with the provinces in the last month made little progress towards a compromise on price increases.

The one-on-one talks, mostly with senior government officials, were scheduled after a formal meeting in April of Prime Minister Trudeau and the 10 premiers failed to settle the issue.

Two provinces—Ontario and Nova Scotia—said they will not accept any price increase during a time of high unemployment and growing inflation.

"The reading we get is that the provinces haven't changed their positions much since the first ministers' meeting," Macdonald said.

"I'm not sure at this point exactly where we will take the negotiations."

He said he planned to discuss the matter sometime this week with Prime Minister Trudeau, who suggested the individual meetings with provinces at the breakup of the first ministers' conference.

Agreement on the current frozen domestic crude oil price of $6.50 a barrel was reached over lunch with the premiers at the prime minister's residence last March 31 before the beginning of a formal conference.

"The least likely option is another full-scale, formal meeting," Macdonald said in an interview.

Asked if he still hoped for a negotiated settlement in the face of the continuing Ontario and Nova Scotia opposition, Macdonald replied: "We're still working on it."

But he turned aside questions of whether Ottawa would unilaterally set a higher price if no agreement is reached, using the power proposed in the petroleum administration bill.

"The possibility is there, but it's hypothetical at this point."

The bill, giving Ottawa the power to set interprovincial oil and natural gas prices, needs only Commons ratification of minor amendments made by the Senate before it can be signed into law.

Although Macdonald declines to say how much of an increase he wants, the figure most often used by federal government officials is $2 a barrel—or about four cents a gallon on the price of gasoline or home-heating fuel.

The current pricing agreement expires at the end of the month, but Alberta says it will not take unilateral action to raise prices as long as negotiations continue.

Gov't Tax Villain—Bawlf

So you're a Victoria homeowner and your 1975 property tax notice came as a bit of a shock? Well you haven't seen anything yet.

That was the gist of the warning to city taxpayers Tuesday by finance committee chairman Ald. Sam Bawlf, who claimed that the villain of the piece is not a lavishly-spending city hall but a provincial government which stubbornly refuses to pay its fair share of property taxes.

Bawlf, speaking at council's caucus meeting, claimed that about four mills of the six-mill increase in the city's general tax levy over last year can be attributed to "unpaid provincial property taxes."

In cash terms, that's a shortfall of about $880,000 on the government's property holdings in the city, which total more than 100 pieces of real estate ranging from hospitals and office buildings to parking lots and warehouses.

The province pays the city a grant in lieu of taxes on these properties, equivalent to 15 mills, which this year represents only about one-third of the amount required if the government paid full property taxes like almost everyone else.

Bawlf said this situation will worsen, and the gap will widen between the sums the government does and should pay as the provincial office expansion program accelerates over the next few years.

In another two or three years the shortfall in payments could more than triple to about $3 million, he speculated, and that burden would fall directly on the home owner.

After the meeting, Bawlf noted to reporters that in a period when the provincial budget has quadrupled, the per capit grant which the provincial authorities pay to B.C. municipalities has risen by only a few percentage points.

"Therein lies the crisis," he added, "and it's going to be a continuing crisis until people bring pressure to bear on this government which will result in the municipalities and homeowners getting a fair shake.

"All the grandstanding in the world, a la the Princess Maguerite, is not going to do anything for those on fixed incomes. And a hell of a lot of good Mincome does if you are being taxed out of your home."

Bawlf said he hopes those taxpayers who are now phoning city hall to complain about their increased taxes will realize the "dilemma" the city is in, and support the submission Victoria is now preparing in an effort to pry more money loose from the provincial purse.

Mystery Grenade A Dud

A Second World War vintage hand grenade found resting beside a tree in a lumber yard on Tyee Road Sunday has been proved a dud but Victoria police don't know how it got there.

Canadian Forces bomb disposal unit examined the war relic and although it was filled with explosives noted it was not capped and thus could not explode.

The Mark 36 grenade was discovered by Joseph Kiss, 14, of 322 Edward, who was taking a short-cut through the lumber yard Sunday evening.

Police searched the area but found no other grenades. A spokesman said they have failed to determine just how the grenade got there in the first place.

Gov't Resigns In Finland

HELSINKI (UPI) — The four-party coalition government headed by Social Democrat Premier Kalevi Sorsa resigned today because of Finland's economic difficulties but agreed to President Urho K. Kekkonen's request it continue in a caretaker capacity.

At a special presidential council meeting, Kekkonen told Sorsa he would call parliamentary elections Sept. 21-22, as urged by the political parties. Elections are not due until March, 1976.

Conflict Alleged In Doctor's Role

Health Minister Dennis Cocke promised Tuesday to investigate a possible case of conflict of interest in the case of a Vancouver pathologist.

The issue was raised in the legislature by Socred MLA Bob McClelland (Langley) who said three Vancouver pathologists own a laboratory equipment company, Mether Supply Co., Ltd., and may be in a position of conflict.

Cocke said one of them, Dr. D. E. Rix, is also on the government's lab accreditation committee which reports on the suitablity of laboratories in the province.

The dual roles will be studied by the health department, said Cocke, and the B.C. Medical Association will also look into the case.

McClelland said later he is worried about conflicts with the other two pathologists in the supply firm because although they are not involved in accreditation, they are in a position to influence the market and hurt other small suppliers.

'Inadvertent Penalty On People Over 65'

Premier Barrett promised Tuesday to consider amendments proposed by an Opposition MLA to the School Tax Removal and Resource Grant Act.

Independent West-Vandouver-Howe Sound MLA Allan Williams said the wording of the legislation penalizes people over 65.

The legislation is meant to increase the resource grant to 40 per cent (or up to $80) and from 20 per cent (or up to $40) of school property taxes.

But under the complicated financial formula included in the act, senior citizens would receive a smaller share than other people with the same taxes because the $50 additional homeowner grant given seniors would be subtracted from the total figure on which the 40 per cent is based.

"It's an inadvertant penalty on people over 65," said Williams.

While Barrett would not promise to change the legislation or say whether it is a mistake, he did adjourn third reading of the bill and said he will consider the points raised by Williams.

Aviary Plan Firming

Victoria city council appears to be heading for approval of Ald. Sam Bawlf's proposal that the old Crystal Garden building be restored as a multi-purpose recreation centre including an arboretum and aviary.

The Crystal Garden committee headed by Ald. Mike Young has endorsed the idea and proposed that the city tackle the task at an estimated capital cost of $1.5 million.

Its report, and some initial suggestions from city comptroller Mason Sheldrick on how the undertaking might be financed, were presented to the weekly caucus meeting Tuesday and will be discussed in detail next week.

As the proposal now stands, rare birds will twitter and tropical plants grow in the main pool area which once echoed to the splashes and shouts of generations of Victoria swimmers.

In the south half of the building at street level senior citizens would have an auditorium, activity centre and meeting rooms.

Bawlf, who first outlined his views on how the arboretum attraction might be set up and operated last January, told aldermen Tuesday that it "does not represent an additional burden directly on the taxpayer in the form of future taxes."

Young said besides seeking assistance toward the capital cost from other levels of government, the city should also consider inviting subscriptions from interested groups and individuals.

Among the possible sources for fund-tapping mentioned in the comptroller's report were the city's own tax sales lands fund which has been used for property acquisitions; the senior citizens recreation centre fund, various trusts and foundations including the H.R. MacMillan and P.A. Woodward foundations; and the federal government's Neighborhood Improvement Program for James Bay.

The Crystal Garden lies just outside the area designated for James Bay NIP expenditures, which includes provision for purchasing property to be used by the New Horizons Group of senior citizens.

But Scheldrick said the boundaries might be adjusted with the agreement of the federal and provincial governments and the James Bay community.

Hearing Commits Johanson

VANCOUVER (CP) — Randolph Bruce Johanson, 28, of no fixed address, was committed for higher court trial Tuesday charged with two counts of attempted murder, two counts of discharging a firearm and possession of a dangerous weapon — a shotgun.

The charges arise from a gun battle with police during a car chase in May, 1972.

Police in Vancouver's east end spotted a car carrying three escapees from William Head prison in Victoria. Two police cars came under the fire and both were hit by shotgun blasts.

One blast smashed the windshield of one of the police cars but none of the constables was hurt.

Election Reform Delayed?

Premier Barrett hinted Tuesday the governments new Elections Act will not be introduced until the fall.

The legislation was promised in the throne speech as a vehicle for electoral reform, particularly in the areas of financing and disclosure.

Barrett had predicted the bill would be brought in last week but said Tuesday there are some problems with the final draft and he will know early next week whether the bill will be introduced at all this session.

The bill is being compared with federal and other provincial legislation, he said, and the government is studying some problems which could crop up based on the experience of those other jurisdictions.

For Sale: One Firehall

Victoria will advertise for sale its old firehall at Burnside, and Dunedin, with a price tag of about $179,300.

City council's land-use and zoning committee recommended the move Tuesday, after learning that the property will not be needed as an outer-city information centre for arriving tourists, as was once envisaged.

Last year the city called for proposals from entrepreneurs interested in leasing the 11,600-square-foot property, but that produced no response.

The committee was told that the owners of the adjoining property, the Intown Inn at 653 Denedin, are still interested in acquiring the land with a view to converting the firehall into a restaurant and lounge, or perhaps erecting a new building to house the same facilities.

An earlier offer to purchase from the motel, which would have involved domolition, was unacceptable to council in January, 1974.

The firehall, vacated by the city fire department in 1973 after completion of the new No. 3 firehall on Bay, has been used in recent months by UNICEF workers to package used clothing for shipping overseas.

In other business, the committee took no action on an offer from developer Hans Hartwig to sell to the city a 2.4-acre property at Kimta and Songhees Road for $470,000.

Hartwig's letter explained that he was offering Victoria first refusal because he had learned the land was earmarked for rezoning to high-density residential use.

But if the land were unsold his intention would be to demolish the existing buildings and proceed with a warehouse development on the site.

Hijack Trio Sought Repatriation

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — Three Americans charged with hijacking planes to Cuba in two separate incidents in 1971 have been returned to the United States at their own request, the U.S. justice department disclosed Tuesday.

It is the first time U.S. citizens wanted in hijacking cases have been repatriated from Cuba. About 100 others who fled to Cuba remain unaccounted for.

The department said the three — a former U.S. marine and a Detroit couple — came back voluntarily and were not expelled by the Castro government.

Bobby Riggs

From World Champ to Sideshow Freak . . . and Now He Labels It 'Paradise'

It's sort of sad . . .

Paradise regained is only a myth; and behind the facade there is a little man who lives with laughter and derision.

When I was quite small I had my tennis heroes. Men like Jack Kramer, like Frank Sedgman and like Donald Budge. I confess that where I lived I didn't hear too much about Bobby Riggs. Yet he was truly one of the world's great players. He beat Budge, won three Wimbledon titles in the same year and went on to take more than 40 national championships in America.

Yet now, some 30 years after his days of triumph, how is Robert Larimore Riggs remembered?

They don't recall what a fine player he was or think of the clever tactics he had to use to overcome his slight stature and cut the physical giants of tennis down to his size.

No. He's the guy who blurted out his now famous sentiments that the world's leading women players weren't much good and that even an old has-been like him could whip them. And he proved it, too, by beating Australia's Margaret Court. But then he improved it all by losing hopelessly to American Billie Jean King. That's how they remember him.

That wasn't the end of Bobby Riggs, though. And it's a shame that it wasn't.

He continues to hustle his way around the world, playing women almost nobody has ever heard of and even men sometimes, if they're bad enough.

Right now, he's in Victoria, which isn't exactly the tennis capital of North America, to help promote Edgar and Caroline Rhomberg's Island Indoor Tennis centre, sign autographs at The Bay, and play a few local-standard players during tonight's Shamrocks lacrosse game.

Now that's sad enough, to sink to a level below which there would appear to be nothing except perhaps a tennis match with polar bears on the outskirts of Inuvik.

But his other exploits on a court that was supposed to have been designed for tennis have been so ridiculous they can't be called funny. Like playing all the burly members of an Aussie Rules football team at the same time on one court; like taking on a woman player while holding an open umbrella in one hand and dodging half a dozen chairs on his side of the net; and like playing another lady while being ankle-tied to a donkey!

In this way, a once-great tennis player has been reduced to a travelling vaudeville act. He's like the high-flying star of a circus who's been injured and is left with only the role of sideshow freak to play.

Yet people flock to see him. They come to gawk. And Bobby Riggs never lets them down.

He breezes into a press conference at the Island Indoor centre, has a quick handshake for the men and kisses for each of the women tennis officials and promptly hands everyone a Sugar Daddy candy stick.

"Don't give it away," he says. "Eat it. That's how I stay in shape," he quips, "I take 500 vitamin pills a day and six or seven Sugar Daddy candy sticks."

And the women coo and chuckle when he goes through his well-rehearsed patter and tells them the "number one favorite place for them has always been the bedroom and the number two is the kitchen."

"Their primary goal should be good homemaking and that should be enough," adds Bobby. "There's no better role, it seems to me, than a happily-married woman. I'm for that system and that concept and if that makes me a male chauvinist, then I guess that's what I am."

Yes, I guess it does. But it's all so corny that it's hard to believe that even he believes it.

Riggs has been married twice — one marriage lasted 13 years and the other 20 years — and now he is enjoying the "single life" and all the girls. The women, he says with no trace of modesty, love him and make a fuss of him wherever he goes.

"Since the catastrophe at the Astrodome (where he lost to Billie Jean King) life hasn't been too bad," grins Bobby. "I can still splash on some Hai Karate and go out on the town and live it up . . . and what would you rather be, the best woman tennis player in the world or a 57-year-old sex symbol?"

He insists his travelling comedy act that's only distantly related to tennis is "exciting and good fun with good money, new places and new faces." But how long can he hope to keep it up?

"As long as there are people who want to have Bobby Riggs come and have a fun day, I will consider it a great compliment and keep going," he says. "I've played serious tennis all my life since I was 12, amateur, pro, Davis Cup and senior, and now I've discovered fun in tennis."

"It's like a paradise land, this wide, wonderful world of women I'm discovering."

You have to admit, though, it's sort of sad . . .

Only Another Three Years Of Clatter!

Relative peace and quiet will prevail on downtown streets after the end of June, but the racket and traffic disruption will start again in September and continue in various parts of the city for at least another three years.

Victoria city council heard that not-so-cheering news Tuesday from city engineer John Sansom, when he gave a progress report on roadworks and assorted underground utility projects.

Sansom said for the months of July and August construction will cease on the jobs tackled by four separate utility bodies: the city itself, with its major Government Street Mall project and other miscellaneous paving or widening programs; the electricity and gas division of B.C. Hydro; and B.C. Tel.

But work will resume in the fall, and Hydro's task of installing new high-pressure gas mains will continue — spreading gradually outward from the city core to residential areas — for at least another three years.

Sansom said the dovetailing of all the works required by the four agencies, each with their own budgets, schedules and political pressures, is causing him considerable concern.

"Frankly, I'm rather worried about it," he told the caucus meeting. "Unless we have some restrictions on how these things are done, and agreement that the city acts as over-all co-ordinator to avoid unnecessary disruption, the city is going to get a lot of criticism that it doesn't deserve."

City solicitor Jakob de Villiers told the Times Tuesday that while B.C. Hydro as a Crown corporation is not bound by municipal bylaws or requirements that does not apply to its gas operation in the city which still exists as a separate entity the Victoria Gas Company.

The company was incorporated by an act of 1860 passed by the legislative assembly of the colony of Vancouver Island, which states that any street construction or installation works carried out must be "under the superintendence and subject to the control of the surveyor-general of the colony or the proper officer having management of the streets" for the then-town of Victoria.

In other words, this legislation which has never been repealed makes the gas officials obliged to co-operate with the city engineer.

Legion Director For Jubilee

Royal Jubilee Hospital will be required to appoint a representative of the Royal Canadian Legion to its board of directors under legislation introduced in the house Tuesday.

Health Minister Dennis Cocke said he asked the hospital a year ago to appoint a Legion member to the board but his request had been ignored.

But Dr. A. C. Pickles, the hospital's executive director, said today Cocke's request had not been ignored.

There has been considerable correspondence on the subject and the addition of a board member required the amendment now before the house to be passed first, he said.

Cocke said, Tuesday that a Legion member should be on the hospital board because of the transfer of the Veterans' Hospital (now known as Memorial Pavilion) to the Jubilee jurisdiction.

Pickles noted that half the current board members are veterans.

Tom Harris, chairman of the hospital facilities committee for the Vancouver Island division of the Legion, said today the hospital has provided excellent co-operation in dealing with any problems arising from the Veterans' Hospital integration.

'Administrative Havoc' Feared in Tax Sharing

New provincial legislation designed to spread the tax benefits from large industries among neighboring municipalities was criticized today by Victoria-area municipal leaders.

They claim the legislation will be an administrative nightmare to implement, could lead to intermunicipal bickering and will do nothing to ease the basic financial crisis facing all B.C. municipalities.

"I can see it causing administrative havoc," commented Victoria Ald. Mike Young.

"Something like 63 per cent of Victoria's tax base comes from industrial and commercial property, and to suggest that some of that money be siphoned off to surrounding municipalities is simply preposterous."

Acting Mayor Ald. Alf Hood expressed a similar view: "I think this could develop into a mish-mash of everyone trying to claim a portion of the revenue resulting from industry in a contiguous minicipality."

Under the amendments to the Municipal Act, introduced Tuesday by Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer, the cabinet may require in granting letters patent or supplementary letters patent to any municipality, that "the tax revenue from real property designated . . . shall be shared by the municipality with any other municipality on a basis provided" in the letters patent.

More General Application

Lorimer admitted the section was drafted to solve a specific problem involving Fort St. John and nearby Taylor municipality, site of Pacific Petroleum's refinery. Because most refinery employees live in Fort St. John, that municipality wanted a share of the tax revenue from the industrial plant.

The minister said, however, that the legislation could have more general application. But he doubted that the cabinet would approve requests from Vancouver dormitory communities to share the wealth from Vancouver's industries.

Young expressed fears that any attempt to apply the provisions in a general way will create even more economic injustices than now exist in the financial structure of municipalities.

"Regardless of whether a municipality is large or small, industrial or commercial or both, bedroom, dormitory or whatever they are all in financial trouble right now, and simply juggling the figures by robbing Peter to pay Paul is not going to help the situation one little bit," he added.

Applying the proposed principle to the local scene, he said, the problems of Central Saanich municipality for example, cannot possibly be compared with the enormous problems facing Victoria which has to handle traffic from every other area, undertake sewage disposal and so on.

Hood said the amendments are another example of the NDP government's "ad hocery", passing blanket legislation to cope with one or two specific problems and thereby creating yet more problems.

Esquimalt Mayor Art Young said he doesn't agree with the intent of the legislation.

If one municipality is the home of employees of a large industry in a neighboring municipality, then the first municipality is getting paid for use of its services through the property taxes paid by those employees, he said.

Only if the municipality were providing actual services such as sewers to the industry outside its boundaries might it have a claim on tax revenues from that industry, said Young.

Young said the legislation might be seen as a step to force amalgamation of municipalities.

"I can't see the city sharing the tax revenue from, say, B.C. Forest Products," Noel said.

$20,000 for Cleanup

Victoria's bill for removing three months' accumulated garbage from the temporary Esquimalt Road heliport "dump" came to $20,000.

City engineer John Sansom informed aldermen Tuesday that regional health officials are pleased with the efficient way the mess was cleared up.

The job was carried out by contractor E. Nixon Ltd. in five days with front-end loaders and a fleet of 10 trucks.

Sansom said the city has now managed to deter those citizens who were continuing to deposit their refuse at the heliport site, despite the resumption of garbage pick-up service.

But he said a sharp increase has been noted in use of the city's garbage wharf at the foot of Herald Street, and much of the commercial and other garbage being dumped there originates from outside the city.

Sansom said he would have to study the present fee structure with a view to curbing such practices.

Draft Beer Supply Short As Effect of Strike Felt

At least a half dozen southern Vancouver Island hotels have been without draft beer for a week or more awaiting settlement of a 15-day-old strike at Molson's brewery in Vancouver.

Outlets normally supplied by Molson's — including five Greater Victoria pubs — have turned to bottled beer to serve their loyal customers while other houses not affected by the strike are enjoying extra business from those who prefer draft beer over bottled.

One downtown waiter said his beverage room was still busy: "Clientele usually stick to one place. As long as you're still open they'll still go there."

But he conceded the other nearby hotels who have uninterrupted supply of draft from other breweries are doing a brisker business.

Pubs affected by Molson's strike of about 200 workers include The Gorge, Red Lion, King's, Century Inn, and Prairie Inn, all in Victoria, and two others in Duncan and Nanaimo.

According to Liquor Administration Branch regulations hotels may not switch draft beer suppliers without formal notice and may not make a change more than twice in a single year.

Molson's employees went out May 20 after contract negotiations broke down. There is no sign of talks resuming.

Meanwhile, the 35-member staff at Uncle Ben's Tartan brewery have accepted settlement of new contract terms providing for $1.25 across the board hourly wage increase, a work day reduced by ½ an hour and double time instead of time and one-half for overtime.

Party Spat Splits Socreds

The ousting of Esquimalt Social Credit constituency president Shirley Wilde was the result of a spat over use of money raised by a wine and cheese party, Socred provincial president Grace McCarthy said today.

McCarthy was answering charges by Wilde that interference by McCarthy caused trouble in the Esquimalt group and led to her being deposed.

Wilde has announced she has joined the Conservative Party.

"Mrs. Wilde's allegations are just unfounded," McCarthy said.

"The general membership in two different meetings have taken a non-confidence vote in their president," she said.

The first vote was taken about a month ago, she said. Following this the rest of the constituency executive resigned so a new executive was elected on Monday.

New president is Lyman Young.

McCarthy said a split in the constituency executive arose over the proposed use of about $1,800 raised by a wine and cheese party to open a Socred storefront office in the constituency.

Wilde opposed the idea, she said but the rest of the executive supported it. Wilde was unavailable for comment today.

Jack Fry, a member of the Esquimalt constituency association, said the membership had voted 38-2 in favor of the storefront office at a meeting in Sooke earlier this spring.

WILDE

At the meeting a month ago, he said, Wilde supporters asked the membership to vote their confidence in Wilde by supporting her stand on the storefront office.

Wilde lost the vote 106-50, Fry said. Subsequently the chairman of the meeting asked for her resignation.

New Saanich Firehall

Saanich may have a new firehall under construction by the end of the year.

Ald. Joe Bourque, chairman of the fire and civil defence committee, said Tuesday:

"An ideal location has been found on department of highways property on Viewmont Avenue near the Royal Oak overpass.

Chief Harold Gains said the property is about 1.6 acres.

"The deputy minister I was speaking to would like to have a rough draft of what kind of building we would be putting up before committing the province to the exchange," Gains reported.

Gains and the committee will view the site Friday morning and Gains was asked to draw up a rough draft of the building for council study.

Gains said later the relocation of the firehall from Hamsterly to Viewmont would provide a more central site for servicing the needs of that area of Saanich.

Gains told the committee that, in addition to the ambulance based at the main firehall on Vernon, another ambulance would be at the McKenzie Avenue firehall, hopefully by late August. Council, during its budget sessions, allowed for the hiring of eight additional firemen to cover the extended ambulance services.

Gains said the Emergency Health Services Commission had told him they were pleased to have an ambulance based in the fast-growing Gordon Head area and had no intention of taking over Saanich's ambulance services, at least until after the end of 1976.

Players Can Select Agents—Ginnell

By JIM CRERAR
Times Staff

Accusations that Western Canada Hockey League players can not play unless they sign with agents associated with their clubs was denied today by Pat Ginnell, owner-coach of Victoria Cougars.

Ginnell, who had seven players picked in Tuesday's draft of amateur players by Natinal Hockey League clubs, said the charge is untrue and pointed to defenceman Rick LaPointe as proof.

The accusation was made by Bill Watters, an associate of Toronto lawyer Alan Eagleson. Eagleson serves as executive director of the NHL Players' Association and represents several top players in negotiations with pro teams.

LaPointe, a first-round draft choice Tuesday of Detroit Red Wings, is represented by Eagleson.

"We make no bones about the fact that we have an agent (Frank Milne of St. Catharines) to represent our graduating players in their contract negotiations with pro clubs," Ginnell said today. But he said the Cougars do not force any of their players to deal with Milne if they want to use another agent.

Ginnell said he worked out an agreement with Milne last fall "because I can't properly represent six or seven players myself in contract negotiations."

He added that he and other WCHL clubs also lined up team agents in order to keep their players from being pestered during the hockey season.

"You can imagine what it would be like if our players had different agents pulling them apart during the season and the playoffs," he said.

None of the so-called kickback money comes from the players, Ginnell added. Under his agreement with Milne, the agent gets six per cent of whatever the pro team pays the player to sign. That six per cent is split with the Cougars, Ginnell getting three per cent for developing the player and Milne keeping three per cent for negotiating on his behalf.

Six other Cougars drafted Tuesday are represented by Milne, including centre Mel Bridgman, the first choice in the draft, taken by Philadelphia Flyers. The others are Don Cairns, a second-round choice of Kansas City Scouts; Jim Gustafson, a fifth-round selection of St. Louis Blues; Kim Clackson, a fifth-round pick by Pittsburgh Penguins; Eric Sanderson, taken in the sixth round by Kansas City, and Peter Morris, a sixth-round choice of Pittsburgh.

Eagleson, calling for a government investigation of the draft payment arrangement, said some teams had been paid as much as $20,000 in kickback money.

Ginnell doubted the figure.

"Eagleson has been representing players for years and doing many of the things he's accusing others of doing now," the Cougar owner-coach said. "He's upset because he doesn't have all the western Canada Hockey League players under contract."

One report said the Cougars stood to make $70,000 out of this year's draft until LaPointe agreed to join the Eagleson stable. That cut the figure to $50,000.

"There's no way I'll know how much we get until our players have signed," Ginnell pointed out. Cougars' share of the signing fee will hinge on how much each player gets, he added.

The six per cent fee has nothing to do with development fees paid to the junior teams by pro clubs when signing amateurs. The proposed agreement between the pro teams and the Canadian Major Junior Hockey League, which embraces the WCHL, Ontario Hockey Association and Quebec Junior Hockey League, pegs development fees at $20,000 for each of the first 50 players drafted and ultimately signed, $15,000 for the next 40, $10,000 for the 91st to 120th selections and $5,000 after that.

In St. Catharines, Milne confirmed Ginnell's statement when he said the money paid to the club comes from the agent's fee.

He said players aren't forced to deal with individual agents, but added: "How many agents do you find in Medicine Hat?"

Watters said the arrangement between teams and agents hurts the bargaining position of the agent, because he must get his player to sign a professional contract before he can pay his junior team a fee.

He said Eagleson had asked for a chance to work with some WCHL teams last fall, but only on the condition the player knew about the fee arrangement.

After LaPointe appointed Eagleson as his agent, Watters said he met with Ginnell who demanded $20,000 in addition to the proposed $20,000 development fee.

"I told Ginnell there was no way we'd pay him $20,000 in addition to the development money," Watters said. "I did, however, say that if the boy wanted to give him a gift he could."

In Montreal, Dave Schatia and Larry Sazant, law partners who operate Pro-Am Sports Consultants Ltd., said Eagleson is not in a position to criticize.

Bill Burton, owner of Lethbridge Broncos of the WCHL — visiting Schatia Tuesday — said a representative from Eagleson's office had offered to return money to his club during last month's Memorial Cup tournament at Kitchener, Ont.

The law partners said that by representing certain players good fees were made and there is nothing wrong with giving part of the fee back to the club or the league to further hockey development because "we still earn a good fee."

Schatia said that Eagleson has taken "hundreds of thousands of dollars" out of amateur hockey without directly contributing to its survival.

Draft Would Stay

OTTAWA (CP) — Proposals to regulate professional sports under federal combines law would not make the annual draft of young hockey players for professional leagues illegal, a corporate affairs department official said Tuesday.

A Commons finance committee Tuesday approved a bill to bring all services, including professional sports, under the authority of the Combines Investigation Act for the first time.

The proposed legislation would make it an offence for anyone who "conspires, agrees or arranges" to limit unreasonably a player's opportunity to enter a league or play for the team of his choice. Conviction for the offence would carry a fine set by court, five years' imprisonment, or both.

Originally, these sections were to apply to amateur sports as well, but the Commons committee agreed to an amendment that exempts amateurs from regulation.

A corporate affairs official said the section normally would be applied only in the case where the parties charged with conspiracy control more than 50 per cent of a market. This means it probably would not apply to owners of professional teams in either the National Hockey League or the World Hockey Association, he said.

"If the NHL and the WHA joined forces, then that would be a different ball game," he added.

Bridgman, LaPointe Picks Boost for Minor Hockey

By D'ARCY KAVANAGH
Times Staff

Tuesday was a big day for Mel Bridgman and Rick LaPointe of Victoria Cougars.

It was also a big day for Greater Victoria's minor hockey program.

Bridgman, who led the Western Canada Hockey League in scoring this past season with 157 points, was made top pick in the National Hockey League's draft by the Stanley Cup champion Philadelphia Flyers.

LaPointe, a defenceman who had 70 points, was the fifth choice, selected by Detroit Red Wings. He followed Bridgman, Saskatoon Blades' Ralph Klassen and Barry Dean and Bryan Maxwell, both of Medicine Hat Tigers. The first seven picks all came from the WCHL.

Both owe most of their hockey schooling to the local minor program and Cougars' coach Pat Ginnell, who guided NHL stars Bobby Clarke and Reg Leach of the Flyers when both were juniors.

Bridgman, in fact, figures if it weren't for the Victoria minor hockey system, he never would have made it as a player.

"I wasn't any good at all when I came out here from Thunder Bay six years ago," said Bridgman. "There were just too many good players for me to have much chance to play."

Once settled in Victoria with his parents, he joined the Racquet Club's bantam team. That move proved the actual birth of his hockey career.

"They gave me an opportunity to play a lot and I couldn't have had that in Thunder Bay," he said.

With more ice time, Bridgman's talents quickly developed. In three years, he joined Nanaimo of the B.C. Junior Hockey League. The next year he made the jump to the Cougars.

Bridgman's first season with the Cougars was an indication of things to come. He scored 26 goals and added 39 assists in 62 games.

Then came the 1974-75 season, the scoring title and the NHL's top pick in the draft.

"Mel is the toughest scorer I have ever coached," said Ginnell Tuesday, "and that includes Clarke."

Bridgman credits Ginnell with turning him from "what might have been an ordinary player" into the league scoring champion.

Flyers recognized Ginnell's influence on Bridgman and they brought him to the Stanley Cup playoffs for a week, all expenses paid.

There were doubts if Philadelphia would get Bridgman, though. The first choice in the draft belonged to the Washington Capitals.

Flyers' general manager, Keith Allen, engineered a trade, however. To get the rights to Bridgman, he gave up Flyers' centre Bill Clement, minor leaguer Don McLean and Alex Forsyth of Kingston Canadians of the Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior "A" Series. Forsyth was Philadelphia's first-round pick Monday and went 18th in the draft.

Bridgman still doesn't belong to the Flyers. Drafted fourth by Denver Spurs of the World Hockey Association, he will wait while his agent, Frank Milne of St. Catherines, discusses contract with the teams.

Should he choose the Flyers, Bridgman will have to beat out veterans Terry Crisp and Orest Kindreachuk for the centre spot on the third line. Clark and Rick MacLeish are fixtures on the first two lines.

"I told the people in Philadelphia that Bridgman is the best centre I have coached since Clarke and that includes Gene Carr and Chuck Arnason," said Ginnell.

The Cougars' coach also thinks LaPointe, a Victoria native, is capable of making the Red Wings should the rearguard decide on them instead of Toronto Toros, who made him the 11th pick in last month's WHA draft. Alan Eagleson is his agent.

LaPointe started in the Esquimalt system and, except for half a season with Nanaimo of the BCJHL, has played all his hockey for teams in Greater Victoria.

Cougars' Don Cairns, a second-round pick by Kansas City Scouts, is a Calgary native whose only major junior experience was this past season with Victoria.

"He's what the pros want, though," said Ginnell. "He's a good skater, tough and patrols his wing well. And he'll continue to improve just like he did with us this year."

Ginnell was disappointed in how low three of his other players went. Defenceman Kim Clackson and centre Jim Gustafson went in the fifth round to Pittsburgh Penguins and St. Louis Blues, respectively. Left-winger Peter Morris went in the sixth round to Pittsburgh.

Caps Get Players 'Who Can Help'

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Lowly Washington Capitals traded the top pick in Tuesday's National Hockey League amateur draft to Philadelphia Flyers for centre Bill Clement, defenceman Don McLean and the Flyers' first-round choice.

"One thing for sure, we got at least two players who can help us right away," said Milt Schmidt, Washington coach and general manager.

The Flyers immediately used the Capitals' selection to take centre Mel Bridgeman, who last season scored 66 goals and added 91 assists for Victoria of the Western Canada Hockey League.

The Caps, picking last in the opening round in place of the Stanley Cup champions, chose Alex Forsythe, a centre from Kingston Canadians of the Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A series. Forsythe had 27 goals and 31 assists last season.

Clement, the Flyers' top draft pick in 1970, scored 21 goals and added 16 assists in 68 games last season. He also played in 16 Stanley Cup games and scored once.

WHA Drafts a Secret

By The Canadian Press

The World Hockey Association completed its draft of amateur players Tuesday, but league officials would not disclose the names of players selected.

The league, which conducted the first three rounds of the draft May 22, billed the 12-round draft as secret, but the identities of players picked May 22 became available the same day.

Accusation Amazes Chynoweth

SASKATOON (CP) — Ed Chynoweth, president of the Western Canada Hockey League, said Tuesday he was amazed that Toronto lawyer Alan Eagleson had accused WCHL teams of taking monetary kickbacks for assuring their players are represented by certain agents.

"This certainly shouldn't come as any surprise to Mr. Eagleson since Bill Watters, who is an associate of Mr. Eagleson's, sat right in my office and told me that their firm was prepared to offer the same assistance that any other agent was offering as long as they got an equal chance to talk to our players," Chynoweth said.

"Our league has been of the belief that if an agent was prepared to return a percentage of his fee to the club to assist them in developing future talent and to insure the survival of major junior hockey, this is only good business."

Eagleson, National Hockey League Players' Association executive director and player representative, asid as much as $20,000 has been paid above a set Canadian Major Junior Hockey League development fee for assuring a player to certain agents.

He called for a gavernment investigation.

In his statement commenting on Eagleson's remarks in Toronto, Chynoweth concurred with the call for a government inquiry.

However, he suggested that while the government was looking into major junior hockey it should investigate the many agents who had appeared on the scene in the last three years and "taken a great many dollars for representation fees and yet they do not have one red cent invested."

"Any boy who has an agent representing him obviously has to pay a fee for this service," said Chynoweth, "and if that agent is prepared to offer a percentage of the fee he charges back to the junior hockey club so that club may continue to produce more hockey players, I do not call that a monetary kickback.

"The philosophy of the WCHL has been that we have an obligation to put money back into tier two and minor hockey. Yet, some agents couldn't care less whether or not clubs in our league survive financially, as long as we produce the players that they can represent for their six-or seven-or eight-per-cent fee.

"I wonder what the government's reaction might be if they took our financial statements and placed them alongside of the statements of some of the prominent agent firms in Canada, who now are complaining so bitterly. I think there might be a few eyes opened as to who is really making the most money from junior hockey."

Watershed Management Set for Island Wildlife

Perhaps you've wondered about those recently-installed signs on the Island Highway designating the new sub-unit boundaries for the Vancouver Island region of the fish and wildlife branch?

Well, hold on to your hats. That's only the beginning.

Wildlife management in this corner of the province is on the verge of entering a new era — providing some recent unenlightened budget cuts by our people's government don't scuttle the effort.

Daryll Hebert, the regional wildlife biologist whose bailiwick has officially expanded to include a portion of the mainland coast, explained how the region is about to enter a super-intensive phase of management.

"Already within our sub-units, we've got the Island divided up into watersheds and we're sort of working on a watershed basis right now.

"That will be the next step in setting regulations."

The region, which now takes in an area of the mainland that has been unofficially administered by Island biologists for the past few years, now is broken down into a total of 15 sub-units.

Boundaries of these sub-units have been laid out on a height-of-land basis and should be fairly easy to decipher if the branch includes a large enough map with the regulations, which should be available in mid-July.

Hunters, who have been accustomed to regulations set on an Island-wide or half-Island basis, will doubtless find the transition strange at first. But, considering the variation in topography and forest transition stages now present on the Island, it may be the only logical way to effectively look after the wildlife resource.

Today, for the sake of brevity and because it is the principal game animal involved, we'll deal with deer.

Several deer studies are continuing in various areas and will eventually become integrated with 10 years of data gleaned from hunter questionnaires.

"We've got a program now that will give us a (computer) printout, by watershed, for the kill that has taken place in those last 10 years — the number of bucks, the number of does and the number of fawns," said Hebert.

This data, combined with a computer analysis of jawbone collection information and carryover counts, will reveal population fluctuations on a watershed basis. Scanning the postmarks on each questionnaire will aid in pinpointing precisely where the hunting pressure is coming from in each area.

But as Hebert pointed out during a talk in his Nanaimo office:

"It's been collected, there's been money spent on it and you might as well spend a little more money and get it printed out in a useful form."

Eventually, wildlife biologists will be able to integrate climatic and forestry data with this knowledge to gain an even greater insight into the factors affecting deer populations on the Island.

As Daryll summed up: "We're getting quite a bit closer to management."

And, the way he said it, management was spelled in capital letters.

Double Date for Shamrocks

Most important for the Rocks is a Western Lacrosse Association meeting with the Coquitlam Adanacs, who may have reason for bolstered hopes of a victory after observing the early shooting troubles that plagued the Irish Tuesday night in Vancouver.

In that one, the Victorians rallied too late and dropped a 9-7 decision to the Burrards before about 600 fans and also dropped two points behind the Burrards and four behind the pace-setting New Westminster Salmonbellies.

Shamrocks will also hae a meeting tonight with Bobby Riggs, the much-travelled, 57-year-old tennis veteran. Riggs is scheduled to play a tennis exhibition at 7, try his hand with a lacrosse stick during the first intermission and return with a tennis racquet following the finish of the lacrosse contest.

Despite averaging a shot every minute at Vancouver, the Irish took slightly over 33 minutes to score their first goal. They were down 4-0 after only eight minutes and were trailing 7-0 when Mike Walsh ended the shutout threat at 13:28 of the second period.

Victoria was behind 8-1 in the third period before starting to get untracked. Goals by Milt MacNeil (4:15), Walsh (9:19), Dave Thomson (10:46), Pete Rushton (10:54), Jeevan Dillon (14:21) and Thomson again (17:50) moved the Shamrocks to within one goal.

However, Vancouver's Ron Pinder managed to put things out of reach with a goal at 19:04.

Tonight's game starts at 8.

Vic High Unbeaten In Field Hockey

Victoria High School finished as the only unbeaten team Sunday in the second annual Victoria High School Invitational boys' field hockey tournament at Lansdowne. Other schools in the unofficial round-robin tournament were Shawnigan Lake, Brentwood College of Mill Bay and Lansdowne.

NANAIMO SELECTED

KELOWNA (CP) — Officials of the British Columbia Junior Hockey League have decided to stage the league's 1976 all-star game on Jan. 28 in Nanaimo's new arena.

Esquimalt Wins

John Entzminger fired four goals and collected four assists Tuesday while leading Esquimalt to a 19-9 victory over Victoria in a B.C. Junior "B" Lacrosse League game at Memorial Arena.

Dale Roberts and Steve Buckley each chalked up three goals and three assists for Esquimalt while Clift Andrews, Kim Browning and Darrell Deane added two goals apiece. Singles were contributed by Brian McKinnon, Ross McKinstry and Randy Bryant.

Tej Labh (2), Dwayne Ferguson (2), Jim Young, Russ Rolfston, Cleve Dheensaw, Stu Thomson and Dave Johl replied for Oilers.

SAM QUALIFIES

NEW YORK (AP) — Sam Snead made it one more time Tuesday for another shot at the only major golf title that has eluded him over the years — the U.S. Open.

But two-time Open winner Billy Casper, who had been the choice of many golf experts to win this year's title, failed to qualify.

Among the others failing to qualify at Charlotte, N.C., were ex-U.S. Open champs Ed Furgol and Ken Venturi; Lee Elder, first black to qualify for the Masters; former Masters champion Gay Brewer; former PGA champion Lionel Hebert; former British Open titlist Bob Charles of New Zealand and Puerto Rican star Chi Chi Rodriguez.

Bullen Rescues Merchants

Glen Bullen, who took over from starting-pitcher Ron Fedosenko in the fifth inning, recovered quickly from a shaky beginning to help Sooke Merchants to a 5-3 victory over Tony's Holdings in a Stuffy McGinnis men's Softball League game at Tuesday at Central Park.

Bullen gave up the run that tied the count at 3-3 before retiring the side and leaving two runners stranded on the basepaths. He blanked the Holdings squad in the final two frames.

In the Victoria Senior Women's League, Stockers North Americans maintained their five-point lead with a 7-4 decision over Esquimalt Combos at Hyacinth Park.

Runner-up CJVI Vicettes kept pace by blasting Seaboard Construction, 12-5.

At Heywood Avenue Park, Jim Miller allowed only three hits and Dave Richardson singled in the only run of the game in the sixth inning as Tony's Holdings clipped London Boxing Club 1-0 in a Heywood Men's League game.

At Sanscha Park, Sidney Hotel moved to within a point of leading Seaboard Properties with a 2-1 Sidney Men's Association decision over Cloverdale Paint and Paper.

VASALA RETIRES

Warm Pleas and Cold Cash

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — Away from the limelight since his retirement from pro soccer last October, Pele has finally given in to two of the most important things in his life: warm pleas from his fans and cold cash.

At 34, insisting he is still in good form, "or else I would not come back," Pele has signed a multi-million dollar contract with New York Cosmos of the North American Soccer League.

Intimate friends of Edson Arantes do Nascimento, Pele's legal name, say he is stubborn and rarely changes his mind. His decision to return to pro soccer after a seven-month retirement caught many people by surprise.

But Pele has an explanation: "If I returned, it was because of my love for soccer. Besides, I want to contribute for soccer to grow popular in the United States, and I want to keep making publicity for Brazil abroad."

Perhaps that was not really why Pele decided to make a comeback, but it is certainly a touching explanation. Especially when $7 million was waiting for him.

For decades, soccer has been an international obsession. Its legions of fans are known for a fervor so fierce that soccer riots have become a frequent occurrence after important games.

But the sport has never fared very well in the United States; Pele's presence on the Cosmos' roster is expected to arouse popular interest.

What was Pele's magic that he could turn himself into one of the most famous athletes of all-time?

For one thing, he was a fine runner and jumper in a nonstop sport that demands those qualities, and could kick and corral a soccer ball with a tireless deftness and agility. In addition, he possessed humility.

Pele changed all that. He was Brazil's most important ambassador abroad. Gifted with a natural flare for public relations-minded discourse, he always found some engaging way of associating his person with Brazil.

The contract, which is believed to provide him with $4.5 million tax free plus a wide range of side benefits, calls for him to play 85 games with the Cosmos — 35 in the first season and 25 during the following two seasons.

Pele will receive 50 per cent of the revenues for the use by Warner Communications, owners of the Cosmos, of the Pele trademark.

Cost Too Much

LAHORE, Pakistan (Reuter) — Pakistan has announced it will not stage the 1978 Asian Games because of the heavy financial burden. The Pakistan Olympic Association president, Malik Mairaj Khalid, told a new conference the government had decided it could not afford the estimated cost of $95 million for the Games.

DAVIS TRADE PLANNED

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Texas centrefielder Willie Davis, acquired over the winter from Montreal Expos, will be traded soon, Ranger manager Billy Martin said Tuesday night.

Davis failed to make the trip to Baltimore for Tuesday's game against the Orioles. When asked if he would suspend Davis, Martin said: "No, we're going to trade him."

Davis has had financial differences with Texas owner Brad Corbett, a source close to the team said.

An Unhappy Night For Ruth Batters

Some high-powered pitching limited batters to a total of four hits in the three games played Tuesday in the fourth annual Greater Victoria Baby Ruth Inter-League baseball tournament.

Larry Wedgewood topped the hurling show with a no-hitter that helped Elk Lake Gulf defeat K and M Crane 6-2 at Sanscha Park. Wedgewood finished up with 11 strikeouts and yielded four bases on balls.

Bob Descoteau hurled a two-hitter as Saanich UCT's blanked Webb and Trace 8-0 at Lambrick Park. Descoteau struck out five and allowed four walks.

Another two-hitter by Kirk Wenzel sparked Oakcrest Foods to a 7-2 victory over Big Barn at Reynolds Road Park. Wenzel struck out seven and gave up four bases on balls.

The single-loss elimination tourney winds up Sunday.

Pitching Is Easier If You See Plate

By The Associated Press

Now that Dick Pole can see the plate properly, pitching is a lot easier way to make a living.

"I think the contact lenses are a big help because I see the plate much better now," said the right-hander from Trout Creek, Mich., after pitching Boston Red Sox to a 4-0 win Tuesday night over Chicago White Sox in an American League baseball game.

"The big thing was that I threw hard to good spots," he said. "I just wish I had that kind of stuff every time out."

Pole, who wore his recently acquired contact lenses for the first time Tuesday night, has been on and off, mostly off, with the Red Sox since 1973.

He had never pitched a complete game before but, on the strength of his three-hit, eight-strike-out shutout Tuesday night, he appears set in Boston's starting rotation, for a while anyway.

"You just can't pitch much better than Dick did tonight," said Boston manager Darrell Johnson. "Every young man has growing pains and Dick has come along just fine. He has worked hard in the bullpen and now he looks ready."

In Tuesday's other American League games, Kansas City Royals dumped Cleveland Indians. Milwaukee Brewers shaded Oakland A's 5-4, Baltimore Orioles defeated Texas Rangers 6-3, New York Yankees edged Minnesota Twins 5-4 and Detroit Tigers topped California Angels 8-4.

Rookie Jim Rice gave Pole threehruns when he hit a homer off Lloyd Allen in the first inning. It was Rice's ninth homer of the season. Juan Beniquez singled home an insurance run in the fifth.

After the game, a carpet of towels led Pole to his locker, where a six-pack of beer and a tray of sandwiches were waiting for him on a wooden chair.

It was Boston's 11th win in its last 15 games.

Pedro Garcia hit a two-run double for Milwaukee, and John Briggs raced home with the winning run on a wild pitch by Oakland's Jim Todd in the sixth inning.

Bobby Bonds started the Yankees off with a leadoff homer in the first inning, his 29th such home run. He broke the major league record in that department he had shared with Eddie Yost.

Painter, Yankoski Trip Gorge

Thanks mainly to John Yankosli and Terry Painter, Farmer Construction nipped Gorge Hotel 3-2 Tuesday at Lambrick Park to take a one-game lead in the Victoria Senior Amateur Baseball League.

Yankosli blasted a home run in the fifth inning to provide what turned out to be the winning run and Painter pitched his way out a tight jam in the sixth frame to preserve the victory.

With two on base, Painter got the next two on a strike-out and grounder.

Many doctors —and most heart specialists— now recommend that we cut our meat consumption by a full one third. DO WE EAT TOO MUCH MEAT? You'll find some surprising answers in this timely report. Halloween Poisoner Guilty

HOUSTON — If the prosecution has its way, Ronald Clark O'Bryan will die in the electric chair for murdering his eight-year-old son with cyanide-laced Halloweeen candy.

A 10-man, two-woman jury Tuesday took 46 minutes to decide O'Bryan—who one prosecutor said "sacrificed his son on the altar of greed" killed Timothy O'Bryan in an effort to collect $31,000 in life insurance.

Prosecutor Mike Hinton O'Bryan death in the electric chair. The only other verdict the jury can return is life imasked that the jury give prisonment for the capital murder conviction.

SASKATOON — Former Prime Minister John Diefenbaker has been named chancellor of the University of Saskatchewan for his third term.

Diefenbaker was unopposed in his bid for the position. He was first appointed chancellor in 1969 and again in 1972. His new terms begins July 1.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. — James Moore, 41, of Gloucester, England arrived at Cappahayden 80 miles south of here Tuesday aboard his 21-foot sailboat Ciselle after a 51-day solo Atlantic crossing.

Moore said in a brief telephone interview the two-ton craft ran into three gales during the trip, the last one off the Newfoundland coast.

"That's something for a sailboat she went like a scalded cat across the Grand Banks."

Moore said he spent the three days keeping water bailed out of the boat and had no time for navigation until the storm ended.

MONTREAL (CP) — Guests at a reception on the HMS Hermes got an unexpected chance to meet Prince Charles Tuesday evening.

The several hundred guests, including Montreal civic dignitaries and Canadian forces officials, had not been told the Prince would be there.

"He was the centre of attention," said one man who attended, "especially among the young ladies present."

The Prince in his naval lieutenant's uniform, mingled with guests under the watchful eyes of several bodyguards. He was described as "an engaging conversationalist" by one.

Prince Charles is a Royal Navy helicopter pilot assigned to the Hermes, which arrived in Montreal on a seven-day goodwill visit.

The Prince was reported to be planning an evening at some of Montreal's livelier nightspots which had been visited in advance by his bodyguards.

OTTAWA (CP) — After completing three-quarters of his 4,500-mile, cross-Canada run and meeting the prime minister, one might think Ken Weldrick would be satisfied. But he's not.

When he finishes the run in St. John's, Nfld., in early July, he has other plans.

"I'm coming back to swim Lake Ontario."

The 23-year-old Vancouver native met Prime Mnister Trudeau on Tuesday afternoon, accompanied by three Vancouver-area Liberal MPs.

In December he started out from Vancouver on what he says is the first mid-winter cross-country jog.

The jogger's yellow-and-blue sweatshirt, faded blue jeans and scuffed-up track shoes were in sharp contrast to the dress suits worn by delegations from the United Nations and the Soviet Union who preceded him into the prime minister's elegant chambers.

Weldrick said he had received pledges of about $6,000 which will be sent by donors to local associations for the mentally retarded.

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — The Richland County sheriff's department says a burglar who took a safe from a service station might be in for a surprise if he tries to hammer it open.

The safe contains five sticks of dynamite.

Wagon Train Dropouts

KENOGAMI, Ont. (CP) — The Great Canadian Wagon Train saga looks different from the inside than from the outside and a Toronto couple are proceeding independently because of it.

Paul and Judy McMullen spent one day with the wagon train on its way to Alberta before dropping out to carry on alone.

"That day was enough," Paul said later. "We travelled four hours at a stretch and saw nothing but the back of the wagon in front of us."

The McMullens were late deciding to join the wagon trek to the west and so had their wagon trucked to North Bay. They joined the wagon train beyond that city after travelling on their own for two days.

"I figured that by the time we met the wagon train it would be spread out a bit, but the way they travel now, everybody is eating someone else's dust," Paul said.

Now the couple is proceeding at their own pace, taking it easy and enjoying the people and the scenery.

"A strange thing I noticed was that for the two days we were ahead of the train, people were a lot friendlier," Paul said. "Now that we're behind the train, people treat us with suspicion."

Safeway Wholesale Staff Settles

VANCOUVER (CP) — A company negotiator said Tuesday that a settlement has been reached between Canada Safeway Ltd. wholesale distributors and the Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Union.

D. M. Monk said in a news release that the settlement included an approximate wage increase during one year of 18.5 per cent on the average wage rate paid last year.

Basic rates were not available.

The union, which represents workers at Macdonalds Consolidated Ltd., Lucerne Foods Ltd. Ice cream and milk plant and the coffee plant of Empress Foods Ltd., served strike notice May 16.

Following strike notice, Safeway served layoff notice to its 4,000 retail employees at 94 stores in British Columbia.

Bill Macdonald, spokesman for the newly-formed B.C. Food Industry Labor Relations Council, said Tuesday in a news release that the settlement was "out of line with the present rise in the cost of living."

Macdonald said the council represents only retail employees and wholesale bakery employees in current negotiations but added that "the warehouse settlement shows the lack of economic balance in our industrial relations system."

Macdonald said that the major food warehouses "are represented by four different unions with four different expiry dates" and said this means a strike would force a tremendous disadvantage on the company in competition with the other stores.

Mr. Monk said that the three Safeway suppliers now are members of the council but were not members when negotiations began.

Macdonald said he expected meetings next week between the council and the Retail Clerks Union, Local 1518, and the Meat Cutters Union, Local 212.

The Labor Relations Board announced Monday it had appointed Charles Stewart mediator in the clerks dispute, and Ed Sims mediator in the meat cutters issue.

VANCOUVER CUPE SIGNS

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canadian Union of Public Employees members have voted about 75 per cent to accept a new two-year contract which includes three pay raises, with Greater Vancouver municipalities.

Union chief negotiator Aubrey Burton told a news conference Tuesday the 5,500 inside and outside workers in his local were not pleased with the length of the contract, but had to accept or face a long summer strike.

The first pay increase is retroactive to Jan. 1 when the base rate for laborers will increase to $5.50 from $4.52 at the end of the contract, laborers will be making at least $6.11 an hour.

Tradesmen's rates will increase to $7.48 an hour retroactive to Jan. 1 from $6.12 and to at least $8.31 by the end of the contract.

b.c. briefs

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia court of appeal ruled Tuesday it had no authority to hear an application to clear the name of a dead man.

The case involved Alfred Wayne Netter, a former Vancouver businessman, who was murdered in California while his appeal of a perjury conviction and four-year jail sentence was pending.

Vancouver lawyer Gordon Hazlewood said the latest appeal was taken because hundreds of thousands of dollars are at stake.

He said the British Columbia Securities Commission had suspended trading in Netter's company, Transcontinental Video, about the time of his conviction for perjury during a wife maintenance hearing in family court.

VANCOUVER (CP) — A judge lauded the RCMP for their fight against drug traffickers as he sentenced two admitted traffickers to prison terms.

Mr. Justice F. Craig Munroe made the comments Tuesday at the close of a special British Columbia Supreme Court hearing into a series of drug trafficking offences.

Sentenced Tuesday were Joseph Jack Lorn Mah, 22, and Ken Wai Keung Yeunge, 19. Mah was sentenced to concurrent terms of 12 years, eight years and seven years, and fined $10,000 or in default three years for trafficking in heroin and opium.

Yeunge was sentenced to concurrent five- and six-year terms and fined $5,000 or in default two years on similar charges.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Louise Ann Lewicki, 31, was to appear in provincial court today after being charged Tuesday with non-capital murder in the death of Arthur Wilfred Garceau, 61, of Vancouver. Garceau's body was found Friday in his room.

Paper Boycott Urged

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Trade unionists in British Columbia were asked Tuesday to refuse to handle or purchase copies of four Thomson newspapers where strikes halted publication.

"Trade unionists are also urged to boycott any advertisers dealing with the newspapers," said a statement from Len Guy, secretary of the B.C. Federation of Labor.

The federation's stand in the dispute between Thomson B.C. Newspapers Ltd. and the Printing Pressmen's Union and the Vancouver Typographical Union was announced as the Sentinel published its second newspaper since March 17.

The paper was published by supervisors and managing editor Tom McKay has said it will continue to do so five days a week.

Guy said Dave MacIntyre of the Printing Pressmen's Union asked for the federation action.

The four papers are the Sentinel, Kelowna Courier, Penticton Herald and Nanaimo Free Press. The fifth Thomson paper in B.C., Vernon News, has a separate contract with the unions which has not expired.

"Whenever a company uses scab labor to do a job a union man normally does, then the federation must react," Guy said in an interview in Vancouver. "The reason for including all the other newspapers where the unions are on strike is because the papers are part of a chain and the unions are certified for the chain."

Negotiations for a news contract between Thomson and the unions broke down in March over a clause dealing with reproduction by newspaper employees of material prepared by advertisers.

The union says a reproduction clause must be maintained for job security but the company maintains it would be unecomonic.

Thomson made its last offer May 24 and MacIntyre said Tuesday he has sent a letter to company lawyers in Toronto asking them to resume negotiations.

Execution Stayed Again

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mr. Justice Kirke Smith of the British Columbia Supreme Court has granted another stay of execution for two convicted murderers of a policeman.

John Miller, 29, and Vincent Cockriel, 19, were convicted in supreme court last fall on a charge of murder punishble by death after they shot RCMP Const. Roger Pierlet when he checked their car in the nearby municipality of Surrey in March, 1974.

During the trial, the crown alleged that the pair deliberately set out to kill a policeman.

They were originally scheduled to hang Jan. 28, but that was postponed pending an appeal to the B.C. Court of Appeals, heard in March. Mr. Justice Smith again delayed the hanging pending the verdict of the five-member appeal court.

Carrion Sold to Stores

MONTREAL (CP) — A meat salvager who collected carcasses for pet food manufacturers told an inquiry Tuesday he supplied a million pounds of carrion for sale to humans in Montreal-area stores in the last eight years.

Rodrigue Dumais, operator of J. M. Lefrancois Ltd., told the inquiry he sold the meat, on an irregular basis between 1973 and 1975, to Corvin Quality Meat of Montreal, Marche Richard of suburban Verdun and Marche Carbonneau of nearby St. Hubert.

Rejean Paul, chief counsel for the Quebec Police Commission organized crime inquiry, described the ring supplied by the slaughterhouse in St. Constant de Napierville, Que., as "a makeshift operation, but it was responsible for a lot of people eating carrion."

For one of his customers, Corvin Meat Market, Dumais said he included meat from dead or diseased horses to keep the price competitive.

"It was I who suggested mixing in horse meat," Dumais testified. "I tried it, it worked."

Paul later indicated Corvin was not aware of the horse meat content.

Dumais testified he also sold meat to Art Burrett of Keene Animal Food Ltd. of Peterborough, Ont., identified in earlier testimony as King Animal Food.

Meat salvagers are licensed to purchase dead animals for use in pet foods but are forbidden to sell the same meat for human consumption.

Dumais testified he took over the J. M. Lefrancois plant in July, 1973, from its owner, Jean-Marie Lefrancois. Lefrancois, too ill to appear before the inquiry Tuesday, stated in a sworn statement read to the inquiry that he had been selling salvaged meat to retail outlets before Dumais took over his business.

Apprentice Subsidizing Sought for Construction

OTTAWA (CP) — A study on manpower needs in the mechanical construction industry has recommended that federal and provincial governments hold talks with the industry with the aim of subsidizing wages of apprentices during periods of low employment.

The study, prepared by Dr. Alton Craig of the University of Ottawa, says such a program would help provide needed manpower during periods of heavy activity in the industry.

Craig also proposes action by government and industry to stabilize the construction industry, which frequently faces manpower supply problems because of its cyclical nature.

The study, which is a joint production of the federal manpower department, the Mechanical Contractors Association of Canada and the Plumbers and Pipefitters Union, also suggests a feasibility study into a national industry pension plan.

Industry spokesmen frequently have compalined that the instability of the industry discourages potential tradesmen and results in shortages during periods of high construction activity.

Some shortfall is made up through immigration of tradesmen from Europe, but statistics indicate that 88 per cent of tradesmen had been trained in Canada.

The study says there is a strong probability that employment fluctuations in the industry will contiue.

"It is in the interest of the industry to do everything possible to adjust and to hold as many apprentices in the system in periods of employment instability as possible," it says.

The study suggests that when apprentices become unemployed in periods of decline, they should be given in-school training and supported by government allowances.

Prison Numbers Drop

OTTAWA (CP) — The number of men and women in federal prisons numbered fewer than 8,600 this week compared with more than 9,200 in the same period a year ago.

One reason is that the least dangerous offenders are being placed on probation or parole, or are being shifted to provincial prisons.

Penal officials suggest that the current figure is unlikely to go much lower.

"As we weed out from our federal penitentiaries the less dangerous people we will be left with the more hard-core and difficult cases," Solicitor-General Warren Allmand says.

Sixty per cent of today's offenders don't go to jail or prison. They receive sentences other than incarceration.

The prison population was growing by 10 per cent in 1973, when Allmand told a Commons committee that cells to house 12,000 prisoners might have to be built.

COMPETITION LAW NEAR

OTTAWA (CP) — Government proposals for a new business competition policy, before parliament in several versions for the last four years, moved closer to legislative reality Tuesday after receiving clause-by-clause approval from the Commons finance committee.

The Liberal government first introduced a bill for a comprehensive business competition policy in 1971. Three cabinet ministers later, Corporate Affairs Minister Andre Ouellet appears close to winning a new competition policy law.

However, it represents only the first half — the non-controversial part — of a two-part overhaul of federal combines law and it is a watered-down version of what was originally proposed.

The bill, which among other things brings services under the regulation of the Combines Investigation Act, will go back to the Commons for third and final reading. It may meet some stiff opposition yet when Senate approval is sought.

The second part of the combines amendments, dealing with such problems as regulating mergers and monopolies and with interlocking directorships, is to be introduced after the current bill becomes law.

The amendments now before parliament widen the prohibitions in the Combines Act against misleading advertising. For example, any misleading representation, even by a door-to-door salesman, is an offence and warranties and guarantees must be backed up by tests.

Cottage Cheese Gains Favor

Of the hundreds of varieties of cheese available in Canada, cottage cheese is rapidly gaining in popularity. More and more people are developing a taste for its mild flavor and discovering its high nutritional value.

Because a ¾ cup serving of cottage cheese boasts a high protein content and can replace a small serving of meat, it has become an excellent low-calorie lunch with either fresh fruit or vegetables. It is also a good source of calcium and riboflavin. Good news for dieters and for those who are trying to maintain the status quo.

Cottage cheese is soft, uncured cheese made from skim milk. In the manufacturing process, the curd is cut, washed with water, drained and salted. Cottage cheese may be sold creamed or dry. Dry curd cottage cheese has no added fat. However, the most popular variety is creamed cottage cheese. Food and Drug Regulations state that it must contain at least 4 per cent butterfat. A ¾ cup serving of creamed cottage cheese contains 160 calories, dry curd contains 130 calories. Two percent cottage cheese which is produced by some dairies has a calorie count between the two.

You may have seen a very smooth cottage cheese product packaged in small blocks and sold in grocery stores. Sometimes it is just labelled as cottage cheese, sometimes it is referred to as "farmers" cottage cheese or "bakers" cheese. It is made by setting skim milk, blending the curd and grinding it to give a smooth texture. Since no fat is added, the fat content of farmers' cheese is similar to that of dry curd cottage cheese. Like all uncured cheeses, cottage cheese should be refrigerated and used as soon as possible.

Serve cottage cheese heaped on lettuce leaves. Add a few ingredients such as fruit or salad vegetables, and a serving of cottage cheese becomes a meal. Add it to summer-cool jellied salad or cheesecakes for extra flavor or glamor.

If you need a cake for a special person or occasion and you want to prepare something scrumptious, but relatively quick, try "Ribboned Pound Cake" from Food Advisory Services, Agriculture Canada. This chocolate-iced pound cake layered with dressed-up sieved creamed cottage cheese is one of a kind. It spells elegance, flavor and second helpings!

RIBBONED POUND CAKE

1 pound cake
2 cups (16 ounces) creamed cottage cheese, sieved
¼ cup sugar
2 teaspoons rum extract
¼ cup finely chopped mixed candied fruit
2 ounces semisweet chocolate, finely chopped

Trim cake to measure about 7x3 inches. Cut horizontally in ½-inch thick layers. Combine remaining ingredients. Spread between layers of cake, ending with a cake layer. Press layers firmly together. Wrap in plastic wrap and chill until cheese is firm (about 2 hours). Ice with Chocolate Icing. Cover loosely and chill for 24 hours. 8 servings.

Chocolate Icing:

one third cup butter
Dash salt
½ teaspoon vanilla
¼ cup cocoa
3 cups icing sugar
¼ cup milk

Cream butter, salt and vanilla. Add cocoa and 1 cup icing sugar. Beat until smooth and fluffy. Gradually beat in remaining sugar alternately with milk. Makes 2 cups.

Mushrooms Packed with Nutrition

THIRD SECTION
FOOD and nutrition

By HILDA BEASTALL

Mushrooms are regarded as luxury food unless they can be gathered wild and free, but since they are packed with nutrition they are still a good buy at the usual 99 cents for a pound as priced locally.

At this price they make economical meals combined with cheaper protein sources such as eggs, cheese, milk and wheat.

CREAMED MUSHROOM SUPPER

¼ pound mushrooms, 25 cents;
1 Tbsp soft margarine or oil, 2 cents;
1 small egg, 5 cents;
1 cup liquid powdered skim milk, 3 cents;
1 slice wholewheat bread, 3 cents;
1 Tbsp wheat germ, 1 cent;
Total: 39 cents.
Pinch of chopped parsley
2 green lettuce leaves

Wash, dry and slice the mushrooms into a small pan in which the margarine has been melted. Cook on gentle heat for three minutes.

Beat egg in cup of milk, add wheat germ. Pour over mushrooms. Cover and continue on lowest heat (barely bubbling) for two to three minutes just to set the egg mixture.

Arrange the slice of bread on the lettuce leaves. Serve the creamed mushroom on the bread. Sprinkle with parsley or other chopped green herb or vegetables.

This is good to look at, delicious and satisfying to eat. A meal for 39 cents and a few minutes time.

Mushrooms can be prepared overnight to serve uncooked on a green salad for lunch next day. Or why not enjoy them for breakfast on hot buttered wholewheat bread or buns?

To prepare overnight or several hours ahead of using: wash, dry and slice one cup of mushrooms, coat at once with a mixture of light oil (soy or sunflower) and lemon juice. Season with finely chopped parsley, chives if liked, or chervil or dill leaves.

Leave to marinate in covered china or glass dish in refrigerator. Pour off the liquid before using; put it aside to use in a saup or sauce at another meal the same day.

Mushrooms are so often served oversalted that it is better to use none in preparation. If needed, a few grains can be added on the plate.

Fresh mushrooms should be used the day they are bought. Cooked lightly in oil for three minutes, they will keep in a covered china or glass dish for three days in the refrigerator.

Make an elegant Mushroom Sauce to serve over a plate of cooked brown rice, canned tomatoes, and a fresh green vegetables such as spinach or shredded cabbage.

MUSHROOM SAUCE

1½ Tbsp soy flour
⅓ cup non-instant skim mill powder
1 cup water
2 tsp lemon juice
½ cup chopped mushrooms

STEAMED TURBOT WITH MUSHROOM SAUCE

1-pound frozen turbot
2 Tbsp soft margarine or soy oil
2 Tbsp wheat germ
¼ cup chopped spinach leaves
Mushroom Sauce — recipe above
Paprika

Thaw turbot by running under cold water until pieces separate. Dry with a clean cloth.

Heat margarine or oil in a skillet or frypan having a lid. Sprinkle with half the wheat germ; place the still frozen fish pieces in the pan and sprinkle with remaining wheat germ.

Cover with lid and steam gently for 10 minutes. Sprinkle with few grains of salt if wanted; turn with spatula; spread the chopped spinach leaves over surface and replace cover.

Steam gently for another five minutes, or until the fish flakes.

Serve on hot plates, with a spoonful of the Mushroom Sauce. Sprinkle with paprika. Serves 3 or 4.

Turbot has an exceptionally delicate flavor and texture, likened by many to sole, but at much lower price. Watch for it as a special occasionally, at 89 cents for a pound. Be sure you get the pieces hard frozen if you want to wrap it for going into the deep freeze or into the top of refrigerator freezer.

High heat and overcooking will make turbot (or any fish) tough, tasteless, and indigestible.

To stretch some ground beef and bacon to serve eight from a Savory Loaf with Mushrooms, here is a recipe which can also be made especially for use as cold slices for lunch box meals.

Equally well it serves the one-person homemaker, who will halve the cooked loaf for freezing a portion for later and use the remainder for lunches and suppers — sometimes cold, sometimes heated between toast slices, and the last slice as the base flavoring for a split pea soup. Versatile is this loaf.

SAVORY LOAF WITH MUSHROOMS

2 Tbsp soft margarine or oil
1 cup sliced mushrooms
1 small egg
1 cup milk from powdered skim
½ tsp salt
¼ cup chopped chives, parsley and chervil
½ cup wholewheat flour
¼ cup wheat germ
½ pound ground beef
½ pound diced bacon (cut with scissors)

There is no need to skin fresh mushrooms, much flavor is in the skins. Either wash quickly in a sieve under cold water, or wipe with a damp clean cloth. Cut off only a thin layer of the bottom of the stem.

A parting word on mushrooms — don't eat those found growing just anywhere unless they are identified by a botanist or naturalist.

Meanwhile beat egg with milk; mix in salt, green herbs, flour, wheat germ. Add ground beef and diced bacon; mix well.

With baked potatoes, steamed fresh carrots and heated frozen peas this will make eight moderate servings.

POLLY KELLER'S SPOON BREAD

(Serves 8)

3 tablespoons melted butter
1 cup white corn meal
1 cup cold milk
3 cups scalded milk
2 teaspoons salt
4 egg yolks, beaten
4 egg whites, stiffly beaten

Grease a 7 to 8-cup souffle mold or oven casserole. Mix corn meal with cold milk; slowly stir into scalded milk. Cook for 10 minutes, stirring often. Add melted butter, salt and yolks. Stir and allow to cool slightly. Fold in whites.

Bake in a 325-degree oven for 1 hour.

Lamb Opens Door to Cassoulet

By TINY BENNETT

It infuriates me when North Americans tell me they can't stand lamb because "in Britain in World War II, all we got to eat was stinking mutton."

My reply is usually on the snide side. I let them know that they were lucky to get mutton, since where I was serving, camel meat was a treat from a constant diet of canned bully beef. But I suspect that few who complain, have ever eaten lamb or mutton, cooked to perfection.

There is an excellent supply of baby lamb on the market and this magnificent import from New Zealand is being offered at special prices for the difficult-to-carve shoulders. I recently bought a big supply at 89 cents a pound and I'm enjoying cooking a terrific range of dishes from this very tasty portion of the lamb — especially as it is genuine baby lamb.

One of these small shoulders saws into five thick chops that are just perfect when broiled on high heat, a cup of red wine added, and the chops finished off for 10 minutes in a 475 degree oven. Baby lamb is lean.

These shoulders are delicious roasted with the bone in, but because of the blade bone, horrific to carve. But boned, sawed into sections or cut into hunks, these low-cost specials open the door to a multitude of culinary delights that take in every style of cooking from Mid-East to Greek, Italian, French and Balkan styles. And one of the really fine meals that makes a hearty feast for a group with good appetites is cassoulet, a famous French dish that I suspect is based upon a Mid-East original.

There are as many versions of this dish as there are stairs in the skies. In the classical French concept, it is a casserole based upon white beans and includes lamb, pork, smoked goose, garlic sausage and aromatic vegetables and herbs. Julia Child, in her great book "Mastering The Art Of French Cooking," cheerfully gives it almost six full pages and suggests that while it may be cooked in one day, the cook might well take three of four days in preparation.

My version is far simpler — completed in one day, — but it is not a "quickie" dish, just great fun when the cook has time and hungry guests on the way.

When cooking this dish last week, I just got into full swing when I realized it got away from me, so I phoned some friends and pleaded with them to come to dinner and help eat it. They all had eaten this before at my table and accepted at once. Otherwise, we would have been eating it for a week — actually, like all bean dishes, it freezes well and heats up better than the original.

So be warned, one does not just cook a cassoulet, it is a symphonic production that often starts as a string quartet and ends as the 1812 Overture — with cannons.

Here then is my working base, where you take it from here relies upon what foods you may have hanging around, the size of your pot(s) and your sense of adventure.

If you don't use pork products, don't break stride, use acceptable substitutes — it is, after all, a casserole in which many flavors are blended with long slow cooking. Just remember that white pea beans form the base, plus mixed meats and a fair old whack of fresh garlic.

TINY'S OWN CASSOULET:

Put four cups white pea beans in a big pot, cover with two inches of water, cover, bring to boil, hold for two minutes and then remove from heat and leave covered for one hour.

Put pot back on heat, bring level of water back to two inches above beans (they soak it up) and add two carrots quartered; three whole onions; and the following all tied in a cheese cloth bag: a cut up stick of celery, one tablespoon dried parsley, ½ teaspoon thyme, two bay leaves, four cloves of smashed garlic, five whole cloves, six whole black peppers. Add one tablespoon salt, cover nd simmer. I also add a pig's foot split in half and a big pork bone sawn in two.

Meanwhile, saw up, or cut up, a baby shoulder of lamb (removing excess fat) in fairly big chunks and roast in 375 degree oven, with couple of pounds of lean pork hunks, until browned on all sides. I toss in chicken wings too.

Pour the beans into a big casserole, removing cheese cloth bag and add browned meats. In the meat pan, add two tablespoons cooking oil, stir and then brown in the juices of two chopped onions, one cup chopped celery and chopped leeks.

When these are soft, add a small can tomato concentrate and a cup of wine, red or white, preferably red and, simmer for about five minutes. Pour into the casserole.

Bake the tightly-covered casserole in the oven for 1½ hours at 350 degrees, adding hunks of rich garlic sausage after one hour and checking occasionally to ensure the dish doesn't scorch. Tilt the casserole to check thta there is liquid at the bottom and, if necessary, add a bit more wine-vegetable-tomato puree liquid.

The dish when completed, should be almost dried out but better a bit moist than scorched. Serve it with hunks of hot Italian or French bread, buttered, wrapped in foil and heated for 20 minutes beside the casserole.

A good powerhouse red Chianti, or some similar inexpensive assertive red wine, goes great and side dishes of a simple green salad, with fresh fruit to follow, is all that is needed to complete a meal that is basically simple but different -- and very filling.

If you suffer from my habit of letting imaginative dishes grow too large in the cooking, split the contents equally, (in terms of ingredients) into one big pot for the gang and another pot that can go from the freezer to the oven. Freeze the secondary pot, carefully sealed when it has cooled, and enjoy a swifty gourmet meal one evening when you are stuck for time. Just reheat and serve as before.

But please, please, please try it with baby lamb shoulders from New Zealand and never hesitate to use your imagination it's that kind of dish.

Living on Welfare With $3,000 Debt

NOTE — Debbie and John, mentioned in this story, are real people living in the Victoria area. Their real names have been withheld to protect their identities).

By AL FORREST
Times Staff
(Last of Three Parts)

It is sometimes very hard to know who to blame for debt.

Debbie, for example.

She's only 19, unemployed, living on welfare of $160 a month. She managed to run up a debt of $3,000 before somebody began to ask questions.

Debbie got loans from three separate banks and two finance companies. She also had charge accounts at two stores.

She was a single girl, unemployed, and yet got the loans without a co-signer.

There is no way she can pay them back.

Well, there is one way: to find a job if she can. But by law, the $160 a month welfare cannot be touched by the creditors.

The provincial debtor assistance branch has arranged for Debbie to pay the money back at the rate of $50 per month — when she's working.

But they are wondering how she could get into the predicament at all.

"Some finance companies do not make very thorough checks on their customers. In other cases, people give them false information. It is hard to know who is at fault," says Frank Steggles of the debtor assistance branch.

He would like to see greater vigilance by businesses granting loans or credit; although on average their standards are already very high, he said.

When there are cases like Debbie, he said, there are loopholes in the system somewhere.

In some cases, it is clearly one of the marriage partners who is to blame for the financial mess.

Often it is the husband who spends the paycheque before h gets home. But sometimes the wife is to blame.

One case handled by the Victoria office involved a woodworker who regularly sent his monthly cheques for $1,300 home, thinking his wife was taking care of the bills.

Unfortunately, she ignored the bills and took care of the paycheque.

When her husband came home, she became frightened to confide in him and the financial problems became worse. All the while, the husband, who was making good money, was totally unaware of the problem building up.

When it came into the open, he went to the debtors assistance branch for help. Now, the cheque is going directly to the branch which distributes funds to the creditors first.

Both the husband and wife seem to prefer this system.

In many cases the culprit is man's inability to foresee events.

For example, John earned big money in good months and had no trouble meeting his fixed expenses of $499 a month. Unfortunately, he was employed as a casual laborer and he had bad months as well.

In the past 12 months, he averaged a take-home pay of only $522 to meet fixed expenses of $499. This left $23 a month to pay his debts.

And they were considerable. The total debt at last tallying was $13,000.

With the immediate job outlook no brighter for the next 12 months, John is faced with taking extreme measures.

It is one of the rare cases when the debtor assistance department is recommending a person declare bankruptcy and start over again. John will have to buy all his goods on a cash basis for a long, long time.

Meanwhile, the debtors assistance branch is more interested in finding solutions to debt than in assigning blame.

They find that solutions come in one form or another for most of their cases which total 120 families a month.

A family or individual requiring help can contact the debtors assistance branch at 387-6831.

Normally it will take about two weeks before the first appointment can be arranged. However, in a genuine emergency cases can be handled in the same day.

By MARY MOORE

The potato salad season is here. I have a new one for you. It calls for cheese and sour cream and will be just the thing for our enthusiastic vegetarians. It will be a great change on many a picnic table in Canada I predict.

Overlap in Grouping for Nutrients

By DR. JEAN MAYER

For the last 30 years, anyone who was at all nutrition-conscious was urged to make sure his meal plan included so many servings from this basic food group and so many from that. But the problem with any food-grouping approach to nutrition is that it is bound to be oversimplified. And it promotes the belief that we can only get protein from the "meat" group and only get calcium from the "milk" group and so on.

Mother Nature is not that systematic, and the food manufacturers aren't, either. How much protein, for example, is there in a bowl of oatmeal; how much calcium in a serving of sardines, bones and all? And in what food group do you place a pizza or a spinach souffle?

Since there obviously is a "nutrient overlap" in all foods (except those with nothing but empty calories), I prefer to have people focus on the nutrients in many different foods, rather than think about which food group is high in any one, special nutrient. I contend that this is the way we can eat better — and probably at lower cost.

If you're looking for protein, these are the different foods to pay attention to: milk, cheese, eggs, fish, poultry, meat, dried beans and peas (legumes), grains, such as wheat, oats, rye, rice, and a number of vegetables, fruits and nuts.

For fats, look to whole milk and cheeses made from whole milk, cream, butter, margarine, nut and vegetable oils, eggs, fatty fish, poultry and meat.

Now, let's turn to the vitamins. Where can you count on good sources?

Vitamin A: Butter and fortified margarine, liver, egg yolk, yellow and dark green, leafy vegetables, some fruits, such as cantaloupe and apricots.

Vitamin D: Fortified milk, whole or skim, fatty fish, such as herrying, salmon and tuna, small amounts in liver, egg yolk and butter.

Vitamin E: Vegetable oils, such as corn, safflower, soybean, cottonseed, nuts, wheat germ.

Vitamin K: Dark green and leafy vegetables, liver, egg yolk, soybean oil. (But don't be too concerned since we get most of our vitamin K from bacteria in our own intestines.)

The B vitamins (Thiamine, riboflavin, niacin, B-6, biotin, pantothenic acid, folacin and B-12): Vitamin B-12 is found only in animal foods — liver and other organ meats, milk and milk products, eggs, fish, poultry and meat. The other B vitamins exist in varying amounts in these animal products and also in whole grains, legumes, nuts, and green and leafy vegetables. Good sources of protein are also good sources of thiamine, riboflavin, niacin and vitamin B-6 (which you can also get in some vegetables and dried fruits). Pantothenic acid and biotin are in almost all foods, as is folacin, but folacin is especially plentiful in green, leafy vegetables.

Vitamin C: Citrus fruits, tomatoes, berries and other fruits, green vegetables like kale, turnip greens, broccoli and other vegetables.

Iodine, from iodized salt, seafood, or produce grown on soil rich in iodine.

Most trace minerals are widely distributed in foods — meats, fish, poultry, shellfish, nuts, legumes, grain, vegetables and fruits.

(For the many readers who want to know more about vitamins, Dr. Mayer has written a "Commonsense Guide to Vitamins." Easy Cooking Methods For Fryer Chickens

Today Canadians are eating nearly twice as much chicken as they did about 15 years ago. The average per capita consumption of broilers is now 31 pounds per year.

Chicken broilers or fryers, (that is, birds weighing no more than four pounds) cut into quarters, and chicken breasts and legs, may be panfried, oven fried, or deep fried.

Panfried chicken: For each pound of chicken mix ½-cup flour, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon paprika and a dash of pepper in a paper bag. Add chicken, a few pieces at a time and shake to coat evenly with seasoned flour.

Heat 2 tablespoons cooking fat or oil in a heavy frying pan until a drop of water just sizzles in it.

Beginning with the meatier pieces, cook chicken, turning once or twice, until lightly browned, about 15 minutes. Reduce heat, cover pan tightly and cook slowly 15 to 20 minutes.

Oven-fried chicken: Coat chicken with seasoned flour; and brown lightly in heated fat about 15 minutes. Arrange pieces of chicken skin side up, in a single layer in a shallow baking pan. For each pound of chicken, spoon a mixture of 1 tablespoon of melted butter and 1 tablespoon of broth or milk over the chicken. Cook at 350 degrees F. turning once or twice to crisp evenly, until chicken is tender, 35 to 45 minutes.

Deep-fried chicken: Coat chicken with seasoned flour; or dip in egg beaten with water (2 teaspoons per egg) and roll in fine bread crumbs.

Heat enough cooking fat or oil to cover the pieces of chicken completely (heated fat or oil should be about 2 inches deep). Heat fat to 375 degrees F. or until a half-inch square of bread browns in 30 seconds. Temperature drops to 325 degrees F. when chicken is added. Dip frying basket into fat so that chicken will not stick to it.

Lower chicken, a few pieces at a time into preheated fat; do not overcrowd frying basket. Cook at 325 degrees F. until tender 15 to 20 minutes. Drain the cooked pieces on absorbent paper and keep them in a warm oven until serving time.

Many savory chicken dishes are also prepared using a combination of panfrying and baking. The meat is browned; vegetables such as onion, green pepper, celery or mushrooms are then sauteed in the fat; flour and a liquid are added to thicken up as a sauce and everything is put together in a baking dish and oven-baked until the chicken is tender. The possibilities are endless and one very flavorful one is "Chicken Baked in Sour Cream" from Food Advisory Services, Agriculture Canada. This dish combines the fine flavor of chicken with the freshness of vegetables and the piquancy of sour cream.

CHICKEN BAKED IN SOUR CREAM

1 cut-up chicken broiler (about 4 pounds)
¼ cup fat
½ cup chopped onion
2 tablespoons flour
1½ teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
½ pint (1¼ cups dairy sour cream
1 cup sliced mushrooms (about ¼ pound)
½ cup diced green pepper
½ cup diced celery
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
Paprika

Brown chicken in fat, about 10 minutes. Drain on absorbent paper. Arrange in greased baking dish. Drain off fat from pan reserving 1 tablespoon. Saute onion in fat until transparent. Blend in flour and seasonings. Gradually add sour cream and stir until smooth. Add remaining vegetables and parsley. Pour sauce over chicken. Sprinkle with paprika. Cover and bake at 325 degrees F. until chicken is tender (1 to 1½ hours). 6 servings.

Blood Pressure Ills

Dear Readers: If you have no interest in your health or the health of those you love, skip Dear Abby today:

Do you know what your blood pressure is? If you do, you are one in about 10,000. If you don't, the most important thing you can do today is call your doctor and make an appointment to have it checked.

You may not realize it, but high blood pressure kills about 250,000 people a year. And hundreds and thousands more are crippled by strokes, suffer from kidney disease, or are the victims of a long list of other ailments due to high blood pressure.

Tragic? Yes. But all the more tragic because U.S. secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, Caspar Weinberger, tells us that high blood pressure can be eliminated or controlled by medication and diet. Also, high blood pressure is hereditary, so if your mother or father have it, that's all the more reason to check your blood pressure regularly. And have your children's checked, too.

It takes less than five minutes, it's absolutely painless and if you can't afford a private physician, your local public health department will check it without charge. Now, get going!

Dear Abby: A close relative of mine recently announced his engagement to a girl he had been going with for a long time. They set their wedding date, and the bride proceeded to make plans for a lovely, big church wedding.

The groom's mother told them if her daughter (who is married, living in another state and expecting a baby around the wedding date) delivers before the wedding, she will not attend the wedding.

In other words, the groom's mother feels that being with her daughter when she has a baby is more important than being with her son on his wedding day.

I was astonished! However, when I told my mother about this, she agreed with the groom's mother. I was speechless. What do YOU say?

Speechless.

Dear Speechless: I'm not speechless. I could make a long speech about why some mothers feel that it's more important to be with their daughters when they have babies them it is to be with their sons when they get married.

Dear Abby: You blew it! The lady with the kid who refused to eat anything but peanut butter and jelly sandwiches and chocolate ice cream doesn't need a doctor's help. All it takes is this:

Don't buy any more peanut butter or ice cream, and when the kids hungry enough he'll eat anything. Including liver and spinach.

Been There.

OTTAWA (CP) — Health Minister Marc Lalonde said Tuesday that he wants to compare his department's study on the arsenic health hazard in Yellowknife, N.W.T., with an independent study by the National Indian Brotherhood which said one-third of persons tested had unacceptable arsenic levels in hair samples. The department study had concluded there was no hazard to the general public in Yellowknife.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

When today's deal was played in a national team-of-four event some years ago, at the conclusion of play a kibitzer commented to another kibitzer: "There was nothing to the hand. It just about played itself."

As will be observed, he was wrong, although in retrospect the play does appear to be simple. But there were a couple of pitfalls on the way, which our declarer carefully sidestepped.

North-South vulnerable. North deals.

	NORTH ♠ J 4 ♥ Q 7 5 2 ♦ A K Q 8 4 2 ♣ 6
WEST ♠ K 10 5 ♥ 10 6 3 ♦ 5 ♣ K 10 9 5 4 2		EAST ♠ 6 ♥ A K 8 ♦ J 10 7 6 3 ♣ Q J 8 7
	SOUTH ♠ A Q 9 8 7 3 2 ♥ J 9 4 ♦ 9 ♣ A 3

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♦	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♦	Pass	4 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Three of ♥.

West's opening heart lead was won by East's king, after which the heart ace was cashed. Next came a third heart, South winning the trick with his jack.

Now a diamond was led to the board's ace, and this was followed by a club to South's ace. South's remaining club was then ruffed with the board's four of trumps. Next the jack of trumps was led and the finesse taken. All the defenders could make from here in was West's king of trumps.

Superficially, it might appear that South's play of the hand was routine. But just try ruffing South's three of clubs before playing South's singleton diamond to dummy's ace. When declarer next takes the trump finesse, West wins with his king of trumps, and then exits with his singleton diafond to dummy's ace.

Whether declarer now leads a heart or a diamond off dummy in order to get back to the South hand to pick up West's remaining trumps, he will go down. Presumably he will ruff the trick — and West will overruff.

Or, going back to trick three, suppose declarer wins the third heart lead with dummy's queen, and leads the jack of trumps and finesses against East's hoped-for king. Again West will capture the trick and lead his singleton diamond to dummy's ace. If declarer now draws trumps, he will eventually lose a club trick. And if he discards his losing club on dummy's diamond king, West will ruff, for the setting trick.

As was stated, declarer's actual play appears to be routine. To prove that it really wasn't, try the hand on some of your bridge-playing friends to see whether they cash the diamond ace before ruffing out the losing club.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By SYDNEY OMARR

Thursday June 5

ARIES (March 21 — April 19): You expand horizons, multiply activities and make selection of partner or ally. See people, situations as they are, not merely as you wish they might be. Elment of timing is on your side. Apparent setback boomerangs in your favor.

TAURUS (April 20 — May 20): You can safely assume that you have behind-the-scenes support. You are given more responsibility. Chances for advancement, reward are enhanced. Cancer, Capricorn natives figure in picture. Past investment could show handsome dividend.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Friends do something positive in your behalf. Know it and get on your own bandwagon. What you want seems far away. In actuality, what you need is closer than might be imagined. Key is to patch communication gap.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Creative endeavors are most likely to succeed. Challenges can be met — and you may be in line for promotion. Leo, Aquarius persons are in picture. You will overcome opposition, legal and otherwise. You're going to advance!

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Intuition sparkles. You are able to bridge communication gap. Aquarius, Aries individuals are in picture. Spiritual insights are gained. Affection is given and received. A new understanding is reached with loved one.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Study Leo message for valid hint. Look beyond the immediate. Perceive potential. Deal with people who are active and have ideas. Gemini, Sagittarius persons may be in picture. Money situation will be clarified.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Be aware of details. Go slow and play cards close to chest. Accent is on partnership, marriage. Ambitions are spotlighted — but you will have to be wary of envious individuals. Creative logjam is released. You will know what to do, despite delay.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 — Nov. 21): Practical affairs could be delayed. There is a hub of activity around employment, coworkers, those who share your interests. Gemini, Virgo persons figure prominently. Your appetite increases. Diet resolution may be difficult to remember!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Road to love may have some detours. Maintain emotional equilibrium. Make gesture of conciliation to family member. Strive to restore harmony on home front. Taurus, Libra individuals figure prominently. You come alive — creative juices flow. Sense of direction can be regained.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Minor crisis occurs — affects property, home, general stability. You land on your feet. You learn valuable lesson. You discover who and what really means most to you. Don't overextend on promises, payments, emotional commitment.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Relative may appear bombastic. Maintain sense of humor. Don't take others too seriously. You have backing where it counts. There is no need to be drawn into senseless dispute. Special communication aids in clarifying objective.

Mike looked over to where Doug was checking his money, "You've got a lot there. It looks about 10 bucks," he said.

"More than that, Dad. I've been saving," replied the boy. "But it's funny. If I multiply the cents by the dollars I get just half the total amount in cents."

How much did he have?

Curtain of Silence Drapes Cambodia

BANGKOK (AP) A curtain of silence has closed around Cambodia since the Khmer Rouge took Phnom Penh April 17.

The few reports that reach this capital of Thailand indicate a long period of isolation lies ahead for Cambodia as the new leaders try to forge a revolutionary society.

It still is a mystery who is in charge of the Communist-led Kymer Rouge administration.

Deputy Premier Khieu Samphan, a Paris-educated economist, was widely believed to have been the strongman of the revolution. He also is defence minister and armed forces chief.

But some refugeees from Prince Norodom Sihanouk, is under house arrest and has become a figurehead like aging Premier Penn Nouth and titular chief of state Prince Norodom Sihanouk, now in Peking.

Sihanouk's ouster from power by his own rubber-stamp legislature five years ago touched off the Cambodian civil war. He has said he plans to spend little time in his native land.

The fee items of news and commentary broadcast by Phnom Penh radio usually are anonymous, but sometimes they are attributed to Information Minister Hou Nim.

The radio station dwells on the "crimes of the U.S. imperialists and their lackeys" and praises the bravery and honesty of the Khmer Rouge revolutionaries.

The new Cambodian foreign policy is described as one of strict neutrality, respecting all other political systems.

There have been repeated mentions that no foreign military bases will be allowed on Cambodian soil. Many observers believe this is directed at the Vietnamese Communists, who supported the Khmer Rouge with troops, supplies and arms.

The more aggressive Vietnamese have never been popular with the Cambodians.

Foreign reporters who emerged from Cambodia during the first week in May, after being confined to the French embassy compound in Phnom Penh, said the early days of "liberation" showed there were at least two kinds of Khmer Rouge — the young soldiers who first moved into the capital and embraced townspeople, and the veteran troops who came shortly afterward and evacuated most of the population into the countryside.

Judging from Phnom Penh broadcasts, the new regime's philosophy is one of self-reliance and a puritanical rejection of Western ways.

Western dress, music and literature are denounced as corrupt and immoral and part of the plan of the previous U.S.-supported regime to enslave Cambodia.

Broadcasts have extolled the virtues of short hair and plain dress and harped on themes of purification and cleanliness both in physical matters like cleaning debris from city streets and spiritual ones like expunging U.S. mannerism.

Phnom Penh radio says soldiers and citizens are working day and night to repair roads, bridges, rail lines and public facilities destroyed or damaged in the five-year war.

It blames U.S. "barbarism" for the destruction.

The radio has urged the populace to make do with what it has and follow the Khmer Rouge example of making everything from scythes to tableware from the metallic debris of the war.

It has boasted that folk medicines are supplanting imported medicines and proving just as good.

However, the scarcity of news broadcasts suggests the new leadership has severe communications and organizational problems and that Cambodia faces a difficult time before reconstruction matches the pace in Vietnam.

No plans are evident for international travel to Cambodia or for even the most sympathetic of Western countries to set up embassies in Phnom Penh.

There have been scattered reports of armed resistance to the Khmer Rouge, but only one significant spot of resistance was confirmed, and that fell a week ago.

The spot was Preah Vihar, a 900-year-old temple of a cliff jutting into Cambodia from the Thai border and accessible from Cambodia only by scaling a 1,500-foot escarpment.

The Mayaguez incident May 12-15 brought to light other Khmer Rouge military activity as U.S. marines found a well-armed Cambodian force on Tang Island 30 miles off the mainland.

Military analysts in Thailand said they believed arming the offshore island was part of Khmer Rouge strategy to defend its territorial claims in the Gulf of Thailand against the Vietnamese and Thais.

POST-STRIKE BLUES IGNORED

Complaints from residents that Saanich has been overgenerous with its treatment of employees who worked for the municipality through the civic labor dispute failed to get a rise out of council Monday.

Three letters of protest against the $800 bonuses, extra week's holiday and $10 an hour overtime the workers are to receive were ordered filed without comment.

There was silence as municipal clerk Gordon Hayward read each letter.

One from Ted Robbins of 4482 Tyndall reported he had been told by Mayor Ed Lum that the increase in money for the employees would be $36,500 in bonuses plus that given for overtime.

"It should be noted that management in all levels of government, in most instances, are in receipt of most generous salaries, reasonable hours of employment and excellent fringe benefits," Robbins wrote.

He added:

"Many of the residents of Saanich, who suffered because of the strike, are non-union salaried employees, who, frequently in their normal employment, may be required to work extra hours without any additional monetary recognition and may get time if he or she can be spared."

A letter from Miss Katherine Rowe of 1621 Knight, protesting a cutback in garbage collection services, received a little more action than the others.

She will be told municipal engineer Cliff Warren's recommendations on how to keep collection costs down will be dealt with at the June 10 meeting of the environment committee.

Laos in Revolution —At Leisure Pace

Washington Post

VIENTIANE — Following a tense week in which the United States was forced to withdraw its aid mission from Laos and hundreds of Americans were evacuated, life in Vientiane seems to have settled back to its usual drowsy pace.

But the calm is superficial. Laos is going through a Communist revolution, and Vientiane is the hub of change that is likely to put the country through periods of convulsions for years to come.

In one sense, the revolution has already taken place. The Communist Pathet Lao has humbled the mighty Americans and sent their right-wing "lackeys" fleeing across the Mekong River into Thailand. The Communists are in obvious control of the government and with startling speed are cementing their position of strength.

But both the Pathet Lao and neutralist Prime Minister Prince Souvanna Phouma insist that the government is still a coalition of leftists and rightists, and that the Communists are not dominant.

This disclaimer indicates that the Pathet Lao, by their own choice, are unwilling or not yet ready to announce to the world that they're running the show in Laos.

"Yet" is the key word. There is no longer any reasonable doubt that Laos will soon join its Indochina neighbors, Vietnam and Cambodia, as a full-fledged Communist state. Businessmen and other middle-class Laotians know this and are stepping up their efforts to leave the country.

The smart tailor shops, the jewelry shops, hair dressers and other establishments that traditionally catered to wealthy Laotians and resident Europeans are closing their doors. Many business people here are of Chinese or Vietnamese origin, and they've been among the first to leave.

But those Lao families who can afford it are leaving too. Although the government recently imposed a single official exchange rate of 1200 kip to the dollar, the demand for hard currency has raised the formerly condoned black market rate to a new high of double that. "My father will pay you the best rate possible," a young clerk in a travel agency said to an American journalist. "He's trying to get our family to France. He'll give especially good rates for large bills."

Fifty and 100 dollar bills are highly desired, because they allow people fleeing the country to carry maximum cash with minimum bulk. The demand for hard currency in Laos has also contributed to the shortage of dollars in neighboring Thailand.

As shopkeepers allow stocks to deplete and ultimately lock their doors, Vientiane is taking on an increasingly drab, depressing look. Those owners who do not intend to leave say business has fallen off sharply.

"I've sold three pairs of shoes in the past week," complained a Chinese shoemaker, who specializes in copying the latest platform-sole look, which Lao girls have taken to enthusiastically.

"People are buying food," observed the owner of a stationery shop on Rue Samsanthai, the most fashionable shopping centre in town, "but they're not spending their money on anything else. This is a time of great uncertainty."

The uncertainty centres on the inability to determine the kind of rule the Pathet Lao will impose. Some western diplomats believe they will become as ruthlessly doctrinaire as their Khmer Rouge counterparts in Cambodia. Others are convinced that the new rulers will keep the country relatively open and the style of life essentially Lao.

There is adequate evidence to support either view. The Pathet Lao have proven adept at keeping foreign governments as well as Laotians off balance:

Even as they demanded the removal of the U.S. aid organization, they emphasized that they wanted to continue receiving American economic assistance.

Just a few days after insisting that they wanted the large U.S. diplomatic mission to be the same size as other embassies, word began circulating that soon the French and other Western missions would have to reduce their staffs.

While the information ministry spokesman was denying foreign press reports that the Pathet Lao were taking control of the government, they were forcing dozens of senior civil servants and military officers suspected of being anti-Communist out of their jobs.

While cracking down on any Laotians who have questioned their motives, they've turned a blind eye on five political slayings in Vientiane in the last month, and on increased violence against Westerners.

Parking? Traffic?

IT'S NO PROBLEM!

downtown

Thursday evening

Yes, Virginia, there really is a place to shop that has more stores, more parking spots, more controlled parking and more interesting malls than just about anywhere else on Vancouver Island. It's called downtown Victoria. It's very easy to find, all our main streets and roads lead into the downtown area and on a Thursday night you'll find the traffic is at a minimum and the parking spaces at a maximum. Why Eaton's even has a covered parking garage in which the traffic goes only one way . . . and the parking slots are full sized! Think of it, Virginia . . . easy driving and parking as well as department stores, malls, restaurants . . . and to top it all off

For those who attend horse shows and have difficulty following and understanding the different competitions, the following explanations may help.

In a jumping class, only the performance of the horse over the obstacles counts, with the lowest number of faults winning. Touches are not counted. Jumps knocked down (lowered) score four faults. Refusals or run-outs at a jump score as follows: First one — three faults, second one — six, to total nine faults. The third refusal results in elimination.

Should a tie occur a run-off over a raised course is usual. Should a tie again result then the fastest time with the fewest faults in the re-run is the winner.

There are many different types of jumping classes all having their individual conditions. Most show announcers will explain each event and scoring becomes quite easy with a little practice.

Hunter classes are held over a different type of course of jumps which should represent fences to be met going across country. Even pace, style of jumping and the horses' manners count here and in conformation hunter classes the build (conformation) of the horse counts 40 per cent.

Working hunter classes do not call for the perfection of conformation as in the conformation division and are judged mainly on performance and manners.

Ticks, knock-downs and refusals at fences are penalized in hunter events and, as in the jumper events, the rider's ability or skill is not considered, only the performance of the horse. It is evident that a skilled rider will obtain a better performance from the horse than a rider with lesser ability.

In hunter classes jumps are from three feet six inches high to four feet and often an "in and out" is offered with fences 24 feet apart to allow one stride after landing and then the take-off for the next fence. For scoring, each fence is treated separately.

A western pleasure class is judged just as that. The horses must give a pleasurable ride. No head tossing, tail switching or in any way making it unpleasant for the rider.

Shown at a walk, jog and lope and often a gallop, these horses must suggest they are the most comfortable and best mannered possible. Just to make sure everything is beautiful 20 per cent of marks offered are for conformation or in other phraseology, "built right."

In a western trail horse class the entrants are checked to make sure they walk, jog and lope in good style. Then entries must negotiate a course of obstacles. Over a narrow bridge, through a gate mounted and get the mail out of the mail box are typical of the tests used.

Promptness and the smooth way the horse works is recorded to select the winner. To score this event offer 10 points for what you think is a perfect performance at each obstacle.

Deduct for stalling other than to appraise the obstacle, and don't give above seven or eight for a good performance or else when a better one comes along you cannot score it higher which it deserves.

If a horse takes more than 10 seconds to start to negotiate an obstacle the judge will often move it on to the next test, the horse getting no score for the one missed.

The cherry-orchard is a dull place these days. Not only has the brocade like mantle of white cherry blossom left the trees, to be replaced by the lush green leaves, but the grey mare and her foal are not there to provide entertainment and amusement.

Early one morning the foal, led alongside his mother, was loaded into a large horse trailer for his first travelling experience.

On the ferry, the foal, not being tied in the trailer as his mama, was able to turn around and look over the tailgate to see what was going on. The trailer, as is usual with vehicles carrying livestock, was placed at the stern of the ship and the ship's doors left open.

And we "stumbled a bit" in our last column on the Saanichton summer horse show. It's this Saturday, not June 21 as reported. Sorry.

If your group has any news of upcoming events or results, write to Phil Merrick, Victoria Times, 2621 Douglas Street, Victoria.

OUTSTANDING horseman in hunt seat has been awarded Victorian Melanie Holland, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin C. Holland. She attends William Woods College in Fulton Missouri and won the Atkinson Achievement Award.

U.K. Soldier Drowns In Rockies

BANFF, Alta. (CP) — Canoeing has been suspended for British soldiers taking adventurous training in the Rocky Mountains after a British corporal drowned Tuesday in the North Saskatchewan River, said Capt. John Adams, a spokesman for the British Military Unit at Suffield, Alta.

A closed inquiry into the accident, which happened near the point where the river interesects the Banff-Jasper Highway in Banff National Park, will open shortly, Capt. Adams said.

Ken Preston, a spokesman for Parks Canada, said the expedition hit rough water in the river, capsizing and ffoating downstream over a 15-foot waterfall. Survivors were found spread over a mile of riverbank.

Capt. Adams said 13 men, led by a qualifed canoe instructor, were on the expedition composed of four canoes and a kayak. The dead man was the lead person in the first canoe.

All were wearing life preservers and safety helmuts.

One private had minor injuries and was taken by helicopter to the Banff Springs Hospital.

The men were members of the Lifeguards Battle Group, which came to Canada for training at the end of April and spent the last 10 days in the Rockies.

The name of the victim was not released.

Harbor Cover-Up Alleged

HAMILTON (CP) — The Hamilton Harbor dredging trial was told Tuesday that in 1974 Kenneth Elliott was working to cover up a series of alleged kickbacks and payoffs, while a man involved in the misdealings was working with the police.

Horace Rindress, a former dredging company official who has testified about a kickback on a harbor project, told the Ontario Supreme Court jury he was working with the police when Elliott was trying to persuade him to take part in a cover plan.

Elliott, 42, and Reginald Fisher, 62, are charged with 10 counts of conspiracy, fraud and uttering forged documents in connection with harbor dedging projects.

Raindress, the key Crown witness so far, said Elliott approached him in the spring of 1974 and proposed a cover story to account for money involved in the payoff schemes.

The witness, former president of J. P. Porter Co. Ltd., a dredging company, said Elliott told him that police would have nothing to go on if they stuck to their story.

Rindress said Elliott put pressure on him to tell investigators that more than $300,000 laundered through a phoney company, International Maine, actually went to directors of J. P. Porte.

Rindress has already testified that some of the money went to another dredging company official as a payoff, while the lion's share went to Elliott, to be divided among the three harbor commissioners. Elliott was one of the commissioners.

Rindess testified that the money, in the form of payment of 15 cents per cubic yard dredged on a harbor project, was a kickback that ensured his company the contract.

Gulf Search Ends

GRAND ISLE, La. (UPI) — The Coast Guard said it crisscrossed every possible section of the Gulf of Mexico and finally cancelled the search for the final man missing in Sunday's oil rig accident.

The other 11 men who were on the barge-mounted drilling rig when it overturned 18 miles offshore were rescued, including five men trapped for more than 20 hours in air pockets underwater.

But the 12th man, Shelly Lagrange, was believed swept overboard without a life jacket.

"We searched 250 square miles with three boats and a helicopter all day — going over the same area more than once," Coast Guard spokesman Leslie Blackburn said Tuesday.

He said the helicopter flew as low as 50 feet above the water while spotters scanned the sea.

"They did not find a trace of the missing man," Blackburn said.

Contractors Set for Summer Of Labor Strife

EDMONTON (CP) — Strikes and threats of strikes are hampering construction projects in Alberta as management officials gird themselves for a summer of labor strife.

Electricians struck the northern half of the province Monday and plumbers joined them Tuesday while in the southern locals, laborers and plumbers voted in favor of strike action Tuesday.

Painters throughout the province have approved strike action and strike votes are pending for laborers and roofers in northern locals.

J. K. Matthews, chairman of the electrical contractors negotiating committee, said Tuesday his group is expecting "a lengthly shutdown."

Cliff Williams, chairman of the mechanical contractors negotiating team, said contractors are prepared to wait out the strike because their association "recognizes its responsibility in an era of escalating inflation."

About 1,600 electricians and about 2,500 plumbers, pipefitters, steamfitters and welders rejected offers of increases of about $3.11 an hour over two years, Williams said.

"The contractors find it difficult to understand how union members could turn down an offer for annual gross earnings of $21,762 by Oct. 1, 1976," he added..

WINNIPEG (CP) — Legislation that would allow the Manitoba government to begin a dental care program for school children as early as the fall of 1976 was approved in principal Tuesday.

Second reading of two dental care bills followed assurances from acting Health Minister Saul Miller that standards of care would be maintained and dentists would continue to be consulted about the evolution of the program.

Miller said the plan—preventive and treatment work for students in grade one—will give preference to northern Manitoba and other areas where dental care is urgently needed.

ALONSA, Man. (CP) — The infestation of forest tent caterpillars that invaded homes and fouled drinking water last year may present an even greater menace this year, Manitoba agricultural specialists have predicted.

The severity of the infestation should be known later this week, but provincial authorities warn the outlook is bleak.

Currently feasting on thousands of acres of popular trees in the central region of the province near Lake Manitoba, the caterpillars are capable of reaching two inches in length and ½ inch in width. They hatched about two weeks ago.

MLA Fears Computer

WINNIPEG (CP) — An opposition MLA said Tuesday a bill to permit the establishment of a centralized government computer centre poses a danger to civil rights.

Lloyd Axworthy (L—Fort Rouge) warned that the bill would give the Manitoba government a "heavy and almost impenetrable system of monopoly over information".

Oil Price Review

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries said Tuesday it will hold a ministerial conference in Libreville, Gabon, June 9 to review oil prices. Informants said whatever the outcome of the meeting, it will not lead automatically to an immediate increase in the price of oil, about $10.40 a barrel at present.

Douglas Returns

WEYBURN, Sask. (CP) — NDP elder statesman T. C. Douglas returned to his former provincial constituency Monday night to say the federal government plans changes in the social structure of Saskatchewan to do away with rural communities and interfere with large numbers of farmers.

Douglas, former provincial premier and NDP national leader who now serves as MP for Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands, said the June 11 provincial election is the most important in Saskatchewan since 1944.

He said the only way to stop federal intrusions into rural life "is to have a government in Regina to fight for you."

West Freight Rates Defended

OTTAWA (CP) — A transport expert, who did a government-sponsored study of rail freight rates in the West, said Tuesday "there is no evidence the West is systematically screwed" by the rate system.

Winnipeg-born George Wilson, an economics professor at Indiana University, said at a news conference that he favors the current railway method of charging what the market will bear.

Prof. Wilson, who carried out a study of Alberta and Manitoba freight rate proposals, said the report was submitted in January but has not been released. The Alberta government found the findings "objectionable."

The blunt-spoken, 47-year-old professor, former adviser to presidents Johnson and Nixon on transport matters, said he cannot comment on the report's details as it has not been released.

The report was submitted to the federal-provincial committee on Western transport matters.

He was asked to look at alternative railway pricing proposals outlined by Manitoba and Alberta at the Western Economic Opportunities Conference in July, 1973.

Among these proposals were suggestions that freight rates should be related to distance. The western premiers were annoyed that some steel goods shipped from Hamilton cost more to transport to Calgary than to Vancouver.

Prof. Wilson said that, in the West, "transportation is a real obsession and it isn't that important any more."

Transport costs were only a small part of over-all costs of commodities.

Western leaders should outline clearly what they mean when they say the West is being shafted, he said. Industry naturally migrated to the largest industrial cities.

The Alberta proposals would have led to a 50-per-cent reduction in freight rates, Prof. Wilson said. This would have led to increased government subsidies to railways.

A sensible approach would be to continue the current railway pricing system in most cases with the transport commission moving in to ensure that rates are no higher than 50 per cent above basic costs where railways face no competition from trucks, he said.

Federal Employee Accused of Fraud

REGINA (CP) — A five-month investigation into alleged irregularities within the Prairie Farm Assistance Act (PFAA) resulted in charges this week against a federal government employee accused of defrauding the government, and the citizens of Canada immediately before the federal election last June.

The charges arise from alleged payoffs and favors to PFAA employees with Liberal sympathies for work allegedly done during the federal election campaign.

Inmate Rehabilitation Plan Flounders on Rocky Finances

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

A unique rehabilitation program for inmates at William Head federal prison started off with a bang and is now in danger of ending in a whimper.

Conarts Marketing Association, a registered co-op set up last October by and for the inmates, has simply run out of funds before it has had a chance to fulfil its two-fold aim of providing job training for inmates and a marketing arm for prison-made goods.

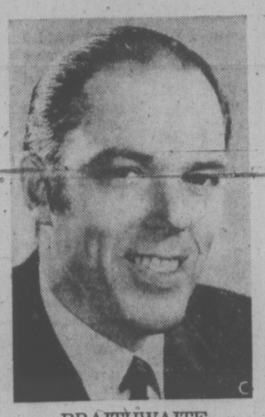
Not only are its funds depleted but it owes $5,000 to a Victorit bank and can see no way to pay off the loan which is callable June 10.

The financial difficulties could sink a novel self-help scheme that, according to a senior official with the Canadian Penitentiary Service in Ottawa, was being watched with interest as a possible model for other prisons in Canada.

The co-op directors, who include community members as well as inmates, have been meeting trying to devise ways to forestall banruptcy — inevitable if funds are not soon made available from community or government coffers.

Their hopes are pinned on an application made last week to the provincial department of labor for $122,000, a "one-shot grant" that board members feel would make the co-op permantently self-sufficient and independent within a year.

The inmate co-op was made possible by an amendment to the Canadian Penitentiary regulations passed two years ago and which allows prisoners to form their own businesses within the penitentiary system. Only mountain Prison at Agassiz and William Head have taken advantage of the amendment.



BRAITHWAITE
. . . criticism unfair

Scott Wallace, MLA for Oak Bay, has raised the matter in the legislature asking Attorney-General Alex Macdonald why the government supports one group and not another.

Wallace said he still hasn't received a satifactory answer.

The co-op's problems became apparent late in April when the federal Manpower department advised it would not be able to supply a $60,000 grant under the Entrepreneurial Local Initiative Program (ELIP), despite verbal indications earlier in the year it would.

Michael Bennett, a William Head case worker, said the co-op had borrowed money from the bank on the strength of receiving a grant. Local funding sources, notably the John Howard Society of Vancouver Island and the Victoria United Way, had dried up.

Bennett said it was two weeks before co-op members were informed ELIP funds had been frozen because of reorganization changes in the Manpower department. There was some suggestion however money would be available after September — but no guarantee.

Neil McKinnon, a 39-year-old inmate at William Head and co-op director, said submissions for help have since been made to the solicitor-general and to the Donner Canadian Foundation, a philanthropic group based in Toronto.

The solicitor-general's department has agreed to pay the interest on the bank loan while no word has yet been received from Donner to Conart's request for interim financing of between $5,000 to $10,000.

Bennett said the co-op's problems stem from the Coarts store at 720 Yates which it took over in February. The store, started as a John Howard project to retail hobbycraft items made by prisoners, has been in operation for a year-and-a-half. It has never shown a profit. The June rent came due Sunday and there are no funds left to pay it.

McKinnon said if a grant is not received the store will have to close.

The Canadian Penitentiary system has been criticized for its apparent indifference to the co-op's predicament.

But the criticism is unfair, John Braithwaite, duputy commissioner of programs for the penitentiary system, said in Victoria recently.

Richard Long, executive director of Linc Services, a private non-profit consultant agency used by the penitentiary service, blames most of Conart's problems on the newness of the co-op concept.

He said the concept is considered a radical innovation by "rednecks" who feel a man should go to jail to be punished and not to make a profit from a business.

He notes, however, the money an inmate would make through selling hobbycraft goods or developing light industry projects would go towards paying his prison costs — now estimated at more than $12,000 a year. The money could also be used to help take the inmate's dependents off the welfare roll.

"From a straight dollars and cents point of view the co-op makes a lot of sense."

In addition it may also cut back the recidivism rate which at 60 per cent is one of the highest in the world.

"If work habits are not taught in prison then how can the inmates cope when they get out," Long asked.

"The co-op is no panacea . . . but it is an answer."

MURDER CHARGED

COURTENAY — Seventeen-year-old Kevin Ewen of Black Creek appeared in Courtenay provincial court late Tuesday charged with non-capital murder of Violet Rust of Miracle Beach.

The 59-year-old woman's body was found Monday in the kitchen of her small home. She had several stab wounds in the back.

Ewen, who was arrested by Courtenay RCMP at 7 p.m. Monday was remanded in custody to Friday to obtain legal counsel.

Hotel Dwellers Protest for Aid

Some 30 residents of hotels, rooming houses and lodges staged a mild demonstration at the legislature Tuesday to protest their exclusion from Landlord Tenant Act protection.

Libby Davies, a spokesman for the Downtown East-Side Residents Association in Vancouver, said that up to 10,000 Vancouver residents are not creases in rent and eviction notices because of a loophole in the Landlord Tenant Act which does not recognize hotel residents as tenants.

She said some residents are facing rent increases up to 100 per cent without notice.

Attorney-General Alex Macdonald refused to commit himself on amending the act.

However, he said he would study the issue after the delegation met the New Democratic Party caucus.

DERA president Bruce Eriksen said his group was satisfied its wishes to have the legislation amended will be realized but added he will visit the legislature daily to promote the group's feelings.

Eriksen said residents of rooming houses or long-term tenants of hotels, mostly old age pensioners or Minicome and social assistance recipients, face extravagant rent increases and are unduly locked out of their rooms.

Rentalsman Barrie Clarke said recently that tenants in hotels do not come under his jurisdiction.

CLINICS PUSHED TO CUT CRIME

The only way to cut down on the heroin-related crime rate is to establish government operated "complete withdrawal" clinics for heroin addicts, says Victoria lawyer George Jones.

Speaking at a Gyro Club luncheon at the Empress, Jones said such a program was instigated in Japan after the Second World War and has had a remarkable success rate.

"In Japan, if a policeman has reasonable ground to believe a person is a heroin addict, that person must, by law, take urine and blood test and if it proves positive, he is put on cold-turkey treatment," Jones said.

He said addicts who are unable to endure complete withdrawal treatment have simply left the country.

"Tokyo is the second largest city in the world, yet women and children can walk virtually anywhere in the city at night without fear of being attacked and robbed . . . you can't do that in most North American cities, including Victoria, where heroin-related crimes are rampant."

Jones said the B.C. government has said time and time again that the Japanese legislation infringes upon personal freedom and is self-incriminating to the addict.

"They're right but what could be more self-incriminating than the breathalizer test? Yet, refusing to take the test is a crime."

He said the government-funded methadone clinics are not helping.

"All medical evidence indicates methadone is more addictive than heroin, and there are people now trafficking in methadone."

'BUYERS' STRIP RHINE CASTLE

BRAUBACK (AP) — A 13th-century castle on the Rhine has been plundered of valuable furnishings by a Briton who faked a $1-million purchase contract, West German police said Tuesday.

They gave this account:

Rheinstein Castle was sold last September to a 47-year-old Briton who identified himself as Peter Lodge. But Dutchess Barbara von Mecklenburg said she never received Lodge's first payment which was due last February.

Instead, the dutchess complained, her family's castle was stripped of antiques worth more than $250,000 and sold at auctions around Europe by Lodge and his self-described secretary, Thomas Allen, 47.

The two disappeared after an auction last month in Cologne where they apparently sold a truckload of castle furnishings. Attempts to reach the two at the exclusive London address they gave — 44 Duke Street, St. James — were unsuccessful.

Investigations showed the two had been convicted of thefts and swindles in Britain before they came to West Germany, where they are also suspects in another castle break-in.

Keystone Kops For Seattle This Summer

SEATTLE (AP) — They look like Keystone Kops, but they won't be dangling from ladders or stepping in buckets of paint — they will be keeping the peace in this city's historic Pioneer Square district.

Six policemen have volunteered to don the turn-of-the-century uniforms to patrol the area until Labor Day.

The policemen might not look as out of place as one would think in the Pioneer Square area that features cobblestone malls, renovated buildings dating from the city's birth and an ornate pergola.

Three of the policemen have mustaches and all will carry the traditional call-box key, for the old-fashioned boxes beatmen used to contact headquarters.

Plane Crash Scatters Pot, Cash

DAWSONVILLE, Ga. (UPI) — A Second World War B-25 bomber, loaded with about a ton of marijuana and with its bomb bay doors open, crashed in rugged North Georgia terrain Tuesday and killed its two passengers — the second such accident in the south within a week.

Last Thursday, a similar vintage Lockheed Lodestar, carrying around 1,000 pounds of marijuana, crashed near Rockwood, Tenn. It's two occupants also were killed.

Robert McCracken, Georgia Bureau of Investigation senior agent, said some 40 bags of marijuana, each weighing 50 pounds, were scattered in the wreckage of the B-25.

"They must have been dropping that stuff off like a newspaper boy delivering papers," said McCracken.

Rescue workers recovered two bodies, too badly burned to be identified, from the B-25 which U.S. Customs officials said had been under surveillance.

"We were interested in the plane because of neutrality violations. It was an unmodified bomber, still carrying camouflage paint," said Jim Dingfelder, public information officer for the customs department in Miami.

"It is a violation of the neutrality laws to leave the country with an instrument of war, without proper papers. The plane was capable of dropping bombs.

"We had it under surveillance Monday. We received information it was refueling at St. Augustine, Fla. and it departed southbound toward Bimini." He said it was not clear if customs officials lost contact with the plane or broke off surveillance.

According to Dingfelder the plane was detected again around 1 a.m. Tuesday by planes from the New Orleans air unit but that "it got away from our planes on sheer speed.

MD Slowdown Brings Layoffs

NEW YORK (UPI) — Hundreds of medical workers have been furloughed and officials warned more layoffs may be necessary at hospitals hit by a doctors' slowdown protesting a new malpractice law.

With fewer operations being performed and fewer patients admitted hospitals' cash supplies from Medicare, Medicaid and Blue Cross payments dwindled, forcing the layoffs Tuesday. The physicians' slowdown, now in its fourth day, was most apparent in parts of New York City and surrounding suburban counties.

The doctors are protesting the new state malpractice law, which they call inadequate in holding back soaring insurance premiums. Gov. Hugh Carey has scheduled a meeting with members of the 27,500-member State Medical Society.

Fuchsias Need Lots of Attention

Fuchsias in hanging baskets have reached high level as a status symbol in the last 15 years. They are lovely, long blooming, can be kept for a second year, and need lots of attention during the whole growing season from April to late September. Equally decorative on balconies as in ground gardens, no wonder they are popular.

Since the fuchsias for this year's baskets are just now beginning to bloom, it is a good time to buy. Trailing varieties are commonly used in baskets, but more upright ones can also be grown to produce a completely covered effect.

Even now, pinching out the tip of every new growth before it starts to form flower buds, will induce branching. Do this almost daily for about 10 days and you will fill out any fuchsia. If already well pinched, leave the plants to form buds.

At the same time, watering is needed. If the basket is of wired lined with moss it mist be given a quart of tepid water each day, slowly, so that most of it remains in the soil.

If of slatted wood, try the same amount and be guided by the results. Widely spaced slats lined with moss, the basket will need and use the quart of daily, Commercially, hanging containers whether of wire or wood, are at least 12 inches in diameter and about 10 inches deep, but even that amount of soil is little enough for such vigorous plants as fuchsias.

When flower buds form and are beginning to open, the containers will be needing a weak liquid fertilizer every second day — a half teaspoon of alginure to the quart of water administered during the morning hours. This will not burn foliage if splashed a little, nor will it make lush growth at the expense of blooms.

Measure the amount, so that no more than this weak feeding is given.

Fuchsias do not like constant wind. It removes moisture from the leaves. They like some shade, but must have at least dappled sunlight for part of each day to produce flowers.

When choice of location is possible, remember that morning sunlight will grow more robust plants in summer. The sun's rays are not so burning as later in the day.

Although most fuchsias don't begin to form buds until temperatures reach nearly 20 deg. Celsius, the leaves lose their moisture rapidly above that point. The danger point begins at 25 Deg. C.

First noticeable is the crinkling and browning of the leaves; then the fine web of the red spider mite may develop. This insect only becomes a problem for plants in dry air.

The prevention is obviously frequent mist spraying with clear water — twice daily when relative humidity is reported at noon as being below about 78 percent.

A combination of dry soil at the roots and dry air around the leaves of any plant can be fatal. Avoid this condition during our normally dry spring and summer weather and you avoid many of the general garden problems. Curing the problems once they are established is much more difficult, if not impossible.

Since the problem of dry air is so general, apply this principle to most areas of the garden as well as to the fuchsias in hanging baskets.

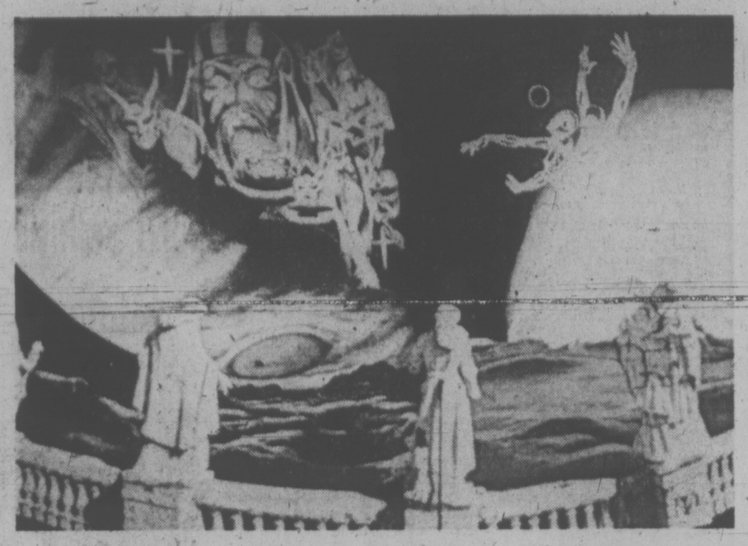
FRANCE FREEZES PRICES

PARIS (UPI) — The French government today approved a drastic multi-billion franc economic package aimed at slowing down inflation and warding off the spectre of social unrest among unemployed youth. It included price freezes and slashing of profit margins.

The program was launched after government soundings indicated that France might be swept by a wave of unrest this fall when 600,000 youths leave school and start looking for their first jobs in a country which already counts 800,000 unemployed.

The program outined in parliament today by Premier Jacques Chirac met with immediate protests from both the business community and left-wing labor organizations and opposition parties.



SENSORY extravaganza called 10,000 Watts of Goddamatch, a multi-media show featuring projected, reflected, recorded light, images and sound, will be presented Thursday at 8 p.m. at Open Space. Goddamatch, a local multi-media performing group, will use lasers, strobes, video and slide and film images in the show.

Finding Suites In City Tough

Victoria remains one of the toughest communities in Canada in which to find a vacant apartment, a survey by Central Mortgage Corporation shows.

And if a family with children is doing the searching, a local community worker says the situation is just about impossible.

The CHMC survey, taken in April, shows Victoria's apartment vacancy rate is .8 per cent, ranking its sixth across the country in the national shortage of apartment accommodation.

Regina, where the vacancy rate is .1 (one apartment in 1,000 vacant) leads the list while at the other end of the scale is Kitchener, Ont., where 5 per cent of apartments are vacant.

Locally, the community worker said parents with children sometimes break down in his office and cry after weeks of apartment searching and hearing: "sorry, no children."

Apartment construction across Canada in the first three months of the year was down about 50 per cent from the same period last year, amounting to only 18,367 starts.

Federal housing experts consider an apartment vacancy rate healthy, allowing fair rents and encouraging building.

Builders say the slow apartment construction is partly due to tough regulations in some municipalities governing building height or location. These discouraged apartment building investment.

They say rent control in provinces like British Columbia also have reduced apartment construction drastically.

They also say rents are not high enough to warrant investment in apartment construction.

The federal government has received 250 proposals for 23,500 apartment units, more than the CMHC apartment budget of $200 million can support. The government provides loans at low interest in exchange for controlled rents over a period of years.

But Urban Affairs Minister Barney Danson hinted in May that the government would put more money into rental construction in the June 23 budget.

Before the Judge

Two men facing a two-count conspiracy charge pleaded not guilty in Victoria provincial court Tuesday and re-elected trial by magistrate.

Seven days were set aside for what could be the longest trial of the year.

James Archie Hancock, 33, of 1316 Rudlin and Gilles Paul Proulx, 30, of 629 Lampson, were arrested on the evening of April 25 and charged jointly of conspiracy between April 1 and 25 to each rob the liquor store at 1310 Esquimalt and Mac's Milk at 265 Menzies.

Defence lawyer Michael Hutchison, originally acting for both Hancock and Proulx, had elected trial by county court judge alone, but made application Tuesday to elect a provincial court trial for Hancock. Cecil Branson, new defence lawyer for Proulx, made the same application.

Prosecutor Peter Birkett said he wanted it on record that he opposed a change of election because it would create further delays of other trials. Arrangements had been made last weekend to shift 10 trials in order to set aside a week for the preliminary hearing against Hancock and Proulx. A trial, Birkett said, would require more time than a preliminary hearing and further shifting of trails would be an injustice to accused persons who were awaiting trial.

"But Hancock and Procjx have been in custody since April and have a right to be heard," Hutchison said.

Judge Douglas Campbell said as seven days have already been set aside for preliminary hearing, he sees no reason why a re-election should not be allowed for trial during those seven days.

Branson said more than seven days may be required.

"We've heard there are between 22 to 36 Crown witnesses ... there'll be lengthy cross-examinations and legal arguments .... it would be safer to set aside nine days for the trial," Branson said.

Campbell set trial for July 21 to 29 and said arrangements between defence and the Crown can be made for an additional two days.

Hutchison and Branson asked for the particulars of the Crown's case as plea had now been entered. Birkett said he would comply.

Hutchison had asked for particulars before Judge Harold Alder May 5 when bail was refused. Hutchison said at that time there was "quite clear evidence" of police use of electronic bugging gear and asked for details of the surveillance. Prosecution said it was not obliged to explain during a bail hearing how evidence is obtained.

In his ruling Alder had supported the Crown's stand by saying such an explanation would mean a full trial during bail hearing and he didn't think that was the intent of the Bail Reform Act.

Earlier this year, Hancock and Proulx were charged separately in connection with two unsuccessful attempts to extort money from two Greater Victoria bank managers.

A presentence report was ordered for a 17-year-old youth after he pleaded guilty to breaking and entering two homes in the Oak Bay and Uplands area and possession of a stolen car, radio, sheath knife and coins. The offences occurred in May.

Birkett said Sidney RCMP had stopped Timothy Coombs, of 959 Balmoral, May 25 while he was driving north on the Pat Bay Highway. Coombs could not produce a driver's licence or driving insurance. Upon radioing headquarters, police learned the car Coombs was driving had been stolen from a home in the Uplands.

Coombs admitted he had taken the car after he had broken into the home. He also admitted breaking into a home in Oak Bay May 19.

He was remanded to June 25 for sentencing.

Coombs was also charged with stealing a car from Empress Pontiac Buick, 2867 Douglas and damaging the vehicle May 25. These new charges were remanded to June 5 for election and plea.

He remains in custody, and was refused bail by Judge Fred Green May 26 after prosecutor Wally Anderson told the court Coomb had just received a suspended sentence in juvenile court for four break-ins during March and April.

Campbell gave a two-day jail sentence to George Paul Morgan, 45, of 326 Johns, after he pleaded guilty to wilful damage.

Birkett said Morgan, who was having a dispute with his common-law-wife at 2:05 a.m. Tuesday, smashed a 10-inch square window at the home they were renting.

Legal aid duty counsel Bill Southward said Morgan had been drinking prior to the incident and "recognizes it was a silly thing to do.

"Because it was a family dispute, I won't deal with it that seriously but if you're back in court again, it will be a different matter," Campbell warned.

Violet Marie Dumonceau was committed for higher court trial following a two-day preliminary hearing.

A presentence report was ordered for Joseph Richard Schembri, of 1225 Juno, who pleaded guilty to failing to disclose to a bankruptcy trustee Feb. 19, 1974, all property disposed of within one year of the bankruptcy.

Prosecutor Alan Bigelow said Schembri was asked under oath if he had removed, sold or disposed any property in the previous year. Schembri said his Sooke home was sold, and he and his wife each received $2,500.

In actual fact, Bigelow said, Schembri received $8,459.74 in the four months proceeding bankruptcy, including back pay, a pension refund and $5,800 for the home. The $8,459 was used to buy a used truck and camper, a used car and to pay for living expenses.

Defence lawyer Robert Johnston said Schembri's version of facts, different from that of the prosecution, would be contained in the presentence report.

Schembri was remanded to June 26 for sentencing.

Rickie Gordon James McIntyre, 17, of 2517 Blanshard, was sentenced by Green to seven months in jail after pleading guilty May 30 to breaking and entering the Pacific 66 Service Station, 1025 Hillside, May 27, with intent to commit theft.

The sentence is to run at the same time as his May 30 sentence of four months in jail for theft of a car Jan. 23 and possession of marijuana Feb. 2.

Carl Bamforth and John Barrett, both 17 and of no fixed address, were charged with McIntyre on the break-in.

The two pleaded guilty May 30 and were remanded to June 24 for sentencing.

They remain in custody. Bail was refused because they had been released on their own recognizance in the sum of $1,000 three days prior to the Pacific 66 break-in on a charge of attempted breaking and entering into Fairfield Shell Station, 1090 Fairfield.

Alder sentenced Charles Harold Fitzgerald, 31, of 370 Kerr, to six months in jail and prohibited him from driving for three years after he pleaded guilty to his fourth impaired driving offence.

Police said Fitzgerald, driving west on Tillicum Road last Friday, collided with a car signalling to turn left into the Gorge Centre. Fitzgerald's vehicle travelled another 700 feet and struck a power pole guide wire before coming to a stop.

Fitzgerald's last impaired driving conviction was in March of 1972 when he was sentenced to five months in jail.

Charles William Karaim, 23, of 660 Cowper, was sentenced to a total of 30 days in jail, to be served on weekends. Karaim had pleaded guilty to two charges of driving while under licence suspension Nov. 22 and Dec. 10, 1974.

He was also fined $300 for careless driving and failing to make way for an emergency vehicle Nov. 22.

Trial date was set at June 6 for Walter Frith, 57, address not known, on a Victoria charge of theft of a $2.98 bottle of perfume from a local store in 1971.

Bail was set at $500 and an order prohibiting publication of bail discussion was granted at Southward's request.

COMMISSION BACKED —BUT NOT DELAYS

Conservation groups favor a royal commission on forestry but said the government should not use it to delay setting aside three lakes for inclusion into Pacific Rim National parks and preserving the Tsitika-Schoen, Vancouver Island's last unlogged watershed.

"The inquiry should be short," said Ed Mankelow, a director of the 15,000 member B.C. Wildlife Federation. "The government and legislative standing committee on forestry are familiar with all aspects of the forest industry."

Mankelow said the system of leasing large blocks of public lands to multi-national companies was ludicrous.

He noted when the system of farming out all public lands to corporations was introduced in the fifties, no consideration was given to other resources — farming, housing, fisheries and wildlife.

"If the government now wants to establish a necessary townsite, it must compensate the corporation for use of public lands," he said.

He noted that some people have requested land for small holdings in the Queen Charlotte Islands.

"But the government can't do anything, because the only suitable land for growing, has been leased to a logging company," he said. "The commission should show how this can be changed."

Mankelow said he would like to see the commission look into question of sustained yield.

"I believe our forest lands were over-committed in the past 20 years," he said. "When the big trees go, we won't have enough timber to keep all our sawmills going."

"In the fifties, the government did little about reforestation," he added.

But Mankelow said the governmesnt should not delay in turning over the three Nitinat Lakes to Pacific Rim National Park and taking action to preserve the Tsitika-Schoen watershed.

"On these issues the people have spoken," he said.

Elton Anderson, a director of the Federation of B.C. Naturalists agreed with Mankelow that the government should act on the matter of the Nitinat Lakes and Tsitika-Schoen watershed.

A former logging operator, Elton said people and regional districts should have more input on the use of public forest lands and a Royal Commission would show how this can be done.

Dr. James Kimmins, associated professor of forestry at the University of British Columbia, and a member of the federation, said the Royal Commission "will clear the air."

He said he favored the system of tree farm licences, but added when they are up for renewal should be altered or changed to meet the needs of the day.

"I believe there is a need for stricter control of forest lands," he added. "If it can be shown that a company has not managed its land properly, the licence should be withdrawn."

Eve Howden, secretary of the Victoria Sierra Club said: "Good land management is what Sierra is all about, and I hope the commission will show how thousands of acres will never re-produce a tree for hundreds of years."

OAK BAY PROJECT 'TOO BIG'

The five-storey apartment and shops building proposed for the corner of Newport and Windsor is too big, Oak Bay council's A committee decided today.

The committee will recommend that council reject the proposal by Greenbank Design Contracts Division Ltd. in its present form.

Greenbank sought lesser site coverage but greater height for the building which would have a shopping mall on the main floor, small novelty stores on the lower floor, two levels of underground parking and 22 suites on the higher floors including a penthouse on the top.

Tax Bill On Hughes' Ship Hiked to $6M

WASHINGTON (WP) — Billionaire Howard Hughes' organization will be assessed an additional $3 million in back taxes for the CIA-sponsored Glomar Explorer, it was learned Tuesday.

Los Angeles County Tax Assessor Philip E. Watson said he would levy an "escape assessment" on Hughes' Summa Corp. because of Coast Guard papers showing that the mystery ship was registered in California in late 1973.

He said the registration papers — disclosed by The Washington Post in April — seemed to contradict the claims of Summa Corp. that the vessel has been permanently licensed in Delaware last year and thus not subject to California taxes.

The new property tax levy would bring the total tax bill being assessed against the Hughes-owned company to approximately $6.1 million. Watson sent an initial $3.1 million bill for 1975 property taxes to the Summa Corp. Last week after he said the company ignored his repeated attempts to pin down the true ownership of the vessel.

Watson said he had been assured by CIA representatives at hush-hush meeting in January that the government owned the ship. It raised portions of a sunken, nuclear-armed Soviet submarine from the Pacific Ocean floor last summer in a top-secret CIA operation code-named Project Jennifer.

Sources said that the Hughes' empire does own the ship and has been planning to build it for deep-sea mining operations when the CIA learned of it and financed expensive refinements for the sub-raising operaion. The refinements were a giant claw to lift the Soviet sub from the ocean depths and a huge barge that could secretly carry the claw and install it in the Glomar's mammoth hold near Catalina Islands.

The sworn registration papers filed under oath with the Coast Guard in Long Beach, Calif., and renewed on the same date last year, state that the Summa Corp. is "the sole owner" of the Glomar Explorer.

150 PROSTITUTES OCCUPY CHURCH

LYON, France (AP) — Prostitutes occupying a church for the third consecutive day succeeded today in bringing their complaints about alleged police repression to the attention of the national government, the police chief and a homosexual action group.

The number of women taking part in the sit-in at St. Nizier church swelled to 150 as reinforcements arrived from two other cities, Marsailles and St. Etienne.

France's national women's affairs agency, which had earlier described the situation as outside its competence, sent officials for talks with the women. Police Chief Paul Noirot-Cosson was reported ready to meet with their representatives.

A message of support came from the Homosexual Revolutionary Action Front. It threatened unspecified reprisals if a police drive in Lyon on prostitutes is not eased.

Prostitution is legal in France, but soliciting is not. The police crackdown has involved soliciting charges.

Rentalsman City Office This Fall

Victoria residents will likely have to wait until fall before the B.C. rentalsman opens an office here.

Deputy rentalsman Phil Barter said Tuesday that although the number of complaints from this area warrants an additional office, the office has run into problems finding suitable accommodation.

Summer workload and employee holidays will compound the situation and officials are looking at a fall opening, he said.

Of the 2,690 complaints filed by the Vancouver office from October to December, 314 dealt with complaints in the Capital Region District, he said.

Man Charged After Girls Die in Crash

A 20-year-old U.S. man has been charged with criminal negligence causing death stemming from a single-car mishap Saturday that took the lives of two Esquimalt girls.

Terry Lee Pratt of Snohomish, Wash., was placed under guard in Victoria General Hospital after the charge was laid Monday.

He is in fair condition in the intensive care unit with multiple injuries.

Esquimalt police identified Pratt as the driver of a car that slammed into a power pole in the 800-block Esquimalt killing Debra Ann Mcleod, 18, of 482 Joffre and Cynthia Campbell, 17, of 1214 Old Esquimalt.

It is not known when Pratt will be discharged to appear in provincial court.

Because a criminal charge has been laid, an inquest into the fatal accident scheduled to begin tonight at McCall's chapel has been cancelled.

Coroner Edmond St. Jorre said he will hold an inquiry instead.

Christie Murder Trial Handed to Jury

By ROGER STONEBANKS
Times Staff

The jury in the Curtis William Christie murder trial retired today to consider their verdict after receiving their charge from Mr. Justice Harry McKay in B.C. Supreme Court.

It was the eighth day of the trial in which Christie, 19, is accused in the death of Stanford Clarence Wray, 53, in the early hours of Oct. 15, 1974.

The defence called only one witness, Christie, who was cross-examined Tuesday. Summations were then given by prosecutor Dermod Owen-Flood and defence counsel Dr. J. J. Gow.

Flood said perhaps the "key to the whole case" is the stabbing which caused Wray's death and how it occurred.

Both men had been drinking in the Century Inn beer parlor and met by chance around 1 a.m. and left in Wray's car for a party on Grant Street, where Christie said Wray hoped to meet a woman and Christie said he intended to collect $250 from Kevin Baker for a drug sale in 1973.

The car stopped on Grant, just past Fernwood Road, close to the party at the house of a man called "fat Al," Christie said.

Flood, in his summation, recalled medical testimony that the wound in Wray's chest was four inches deep, angled downward at 45 degrees, reaching the heart.

In the position in which Christie said he was in during a struggle with Wray face down almost on the car seat the older man pulling his hair — the accused had said he couldn't punch Wray with his right hand because his fist kept striking the steering wheel.

Yet, Christie said he used both hands to open the knife he had borrowed in the pub from Donald Charles McCrae.

Flood suggested it would be physically impossible for this to happen. If he couldn't punch Wray, it was even more impossible to stab him in the position he said he was in.

Flood recalled the testimony of McCrae, who asked Christie why he wanted to borrow the knife and said he was told it was wanted "to roll a wino or a drunk" and indicated an older man in the pub.

After the stabbing, Flood said the first thing Christie did was try to conceal the evidence. He took the man's wallet, burned the identification, hid the blood-soaked sweater and washed his own clothes.

He didn't tell police about "fat Al" or Kevin Baker and he had "never, ever" admitted to police that he met McCraee and borrowed the knife.

He didn't lead police to McCrae, Flood said, because he had told McCrae what he wanted the knife for — to roll a drunk. Christie subsequently did lead police to the clothes and other evidence but not to the knife.

"Are those the actions of a man who struck in self-defence or do they point to guilty and an attempt to avoid criminal responsibility," Flood asked the jury.

As to drunkeness, Flood said Christie's testimony is "unbelievable" that he drank the bulk of a 26-ounce bottle of rum and close to 20 glasses of beer that night. The accused had said he weighed 130 pounds then. It was "inconsistent" to drink that much and remember all the details of the stabbing.

During cross-examination, Christie admitted to a record involving convictions for public mischief and failing to remain at the scene of an accident in 1974, possession of stolen property in 1973 and two counts of armed robbery in 1972.

Christie admitted he gave the wrong residential address when questioned by police, denied borrowing a knife, lied about wearing a jacket and leaving it in the pub and lied about being in a car that night.

He agreed he had never led police to the knife saying "I wanted to produce the knife at the trial myself to show I wasn't hiding anything."

He agreed he had denied that McCrea had been at a table where he was drinking. He said he didn't know "fat Al's" second name.

He also denied part of a signed statement he gave police saying the knife was in a case in his pocket. It was on his belt, he said.

He also denied another part of the statement that he returned from a brief visit to the King's Hotel beer parlor and sat with the same five people he had left. He told the trial he sat alone on his return.

Asked why he didn't make corrections to the statement, he said it was seven pages long and "I just glanced at it."

He told Flood "you're wrong" when it was suggested it was impossible for him to stab Wray in the position he said he was in when the car was parked.

Flood suggested Christie had Wray drive him on the pretence of getting him a woman, to within a close distance of his own apartment.

"We stpped two houses from the party."

And you produced a knife and asked for his wallet? And he grabbed you by the hair?

"No sir."

Why didn't youo phone from "fat Al's" for an ambulance?

"I was scared."

Why didn't you phone from "I was scared."

Flood suggested that Christie told McCrae, when both were in police cells, that both of their lives depended on McCrae's evidence.

"No sir."

Finishing up his own direct testimony, Christie said he didn't do anything to cause Wray to pinch him, didn't threaten him or show him a knife.

Did you have any intention to rob him, asked Dr. Gow.

"No sir."

Did you rob him?

"No sir."

Did you attempt to rob him?

"No sir."

Dr. Gow, in his summation, asked the jury to remember that Christie said he borrowed a knife as protection to collect a debt and that a gun had been pulled once before by "fat Al" where he was told Baker could be found.

There was no apparent reason for Wray to punch Christie but "alcohol makes behavior unpredictable and irrational."

The two men, struggling in the car, the knife entering in a downward progression, was "perfectly consistent" with what Christie said.

Although there were "little variations" in Christie's signed statement, more than 90 per cent of it was identical with what he told the court.

The lies were "natural in the circumstances" and Dr. Gow recalled that one detective admitted to telling Christie during the interview that his girl friend's name was known, when in fact it wasn't at that moment.

If the jury found conflict in evidence between McCrae and Christie, it should be resolved in favor of the accused.

Murder, said Dr. Gow, means doing an act which causes death meaning to cause death. Constructive murder required a specific intent to commit or attempt to commit a robbery.

The plea of self-defence arises when there is an unlawful assault and he submitted that Christie was under the apprehension of receiving bodily harm.

The defence of drunkenness was owing to Christie who had a "very considerable amount of drink" which could have so affected him to prevent formation of a specific intent to kill or to rob.

"I suggest he had a general intent to strike to get free but no specific intent and he was incapable of forming specific intent by reason of intoxication," he said.

There was also, he suggested, the defence of provocation because Wray's action in pulling strongly on Christie's hair was sufficient to deprive an ordinary person of self-control.

Flood said the jury had three verdicts in front of them: Guilty as charged; not guilty of murder but guilty of manslaughter; or not guilty at all.

If self-defence was accepted, the verdict would be not guilty of anything. If drunkenness or provocation was accepted, the verdict would be not guilty of murder but guilty of manslaughter.

WOMEN'S PLAN BCGEU TOPIC

Women in the provincial public service are subject of a campaign expected to be backed by the 35,000-member B.C. Government Employees Union at its Saturday and Sunday convention in Vancouver.

In an effort to eliminate discrimination against women at union level and at the bargaining table, delegates will be presented with a series of proposals passed last weekend at a conference of 75 BCGEU women officers.

—Inclusion of job classifications predominantly held by women in public service training opportunities.

Womb Lullaby Baby Pacifier

MALTON, Ont. (CP) — Capitol Records Canada Ltd. announced Tuesday it is releasing in June its first long-playing baby pacifier entitled Lullaby From the Womb.

The company said in a release the album features the sounds of a mother's main artery, as well as a selection of pieces by composers Schumann, Tchaikovsky, Bach and other set against the rhythmic pulsating sounds from the womb.

Oiginating in Japan, the record has sold close to 10,000 copies in that country. It is most effective with babies less than one month old, Capitol said.

The album was the brainchild of Dr. Hajime Murooka of Tokyo's Nippon Medical University.

Dr. Murooka, suspecting that the crying bouts of newborn babies were partly due to homesickness for the family prenatal environment of their mother's wombs inserted a microphone inside the uterus of a woman who was eight months pregnant.

The subsequent recording was tested on 550 infants at the hospital. Upon hearing the record, 402 babies stopped crying within the first minute, and 163 of them went to sleep.

The Canadian reliease will be available in stores before the end of the month, the company said.

PENSION BILL UP

OTTAWA (CP) — A long-promised government bill to pay an old-age pension to a pensioner's husband or wife between 60 and 65 was introduced Tuesday by Welfare Minister Marc Lalonde.

The bill to amend the Old Age Security Act is designed basically to assist couples now forced to live on one pension.

There now are 1.9 million persons receiving Old Age Security payments, which go to all persons 65 or older. This amendment would apply to about 85,000 spouses whose marriage partners are 65 or older.

WHAT INSTRUMENTS are these, causing Marg Piercy that look of mock terror? They're surgical implements of another era, around the turn of the century, on display in the foyer at Victoria General Hospital as part of exhibitions marking 75th anniversary of the St. Joseph's School of Nursing this weekend. Marg is a clerk at the hospital. About 650 graduates of nursing school are expected to take part in three-day celebration, beginning Thursday. (Bill Halkett photo)

BARRETT WILLING TO TAKE LOSS

6% Loans at B.C. Bank

By LINDA HUGHES
Times Staff

Six per cent loans and rates will be offered by British Columbia's new banking institution, Premier Barrett promised Tuesday.

The cheap loans will only be available to low-income people, he said, and the proposed Savings and Trust Corporation of B.C. will be willing to take a loss on those loans.

Low-price mortgages would likely be open to a wider range of people, he said.

His remarks came after the legislature gave second reading, approval in principle, to the bill to establish the new financial institution.

While all opposition members expressed concern about the ultimate role of the new bank, only the three Independent MLAs and two Liberal members voted against second reading. The Socreds and Tories support the bill in principle.

Barrett said he could announce the six per cent interest rate for personal loans under $3,000 despite the fact the new corporation will not be in operation for another year.

The cheap loans will be patterned after low-cost loans offered by credit unions recently but, while the credit unions say they have not lost on the loans, the government bank would be prepared to do so, he said.

Under the credit union scheme, the income qualification for low-interest loans was $5,400 for a single person and $8,200 for a family.

If the credit unions agree to be the vehicle for the government's new bank, the corporation will probably have about 14 regional offices, said Barrett.

But if the credit unions do not want to participate in the scheme, the government will have to make new plans which will likely involve more offices and more expenses, he said.

During debate, Independent MLA Pat McGeer (Vancouver-Point Grey) said the bill is just a "hoax" and will not solve the financial problems facing B.C. and other parts of Canada.

The amount of money the government could inject into the system is minimal, he said, and the corporation will have no effect on the runaway inflation plaguing B.C.

McGeer said the legislation is designed to take over the credit unions of B.C. and gives the government the power to destroy any credit union which does not play along with the new bank.

Independent MLA Garde Gardom predicted, however, that in the case of a strike by the corporation's employees economic havoc would be created.

The Vancouver-Point Grey member suggested that individuals hired by the institution should have to accept binding arbitration.

"This will become the largest financial institution in B.C. and if it's closed up for two months the economy will be in severe straits."

The bill is yet another indication, he said, that the NDP is giving itself enormous powers over the province's economy.

Premier Barrett said the corporation is designed to work as a partner with the credit union network, and the government has no intentions of undermining credit unions.

"Credit unions can get vastly increased funds and the partnership will provide additional recognition to the stature of credit unions' reputation."

"Does that sound like a plot?"

Dowding Suspends McGeer

Independent MLA Pat McGeer (Vancouver — Point Grey) was thrown out of the legislature late Tuesday night and suspended from parliamentary activities until Thursday.

MLAs on both sides of the house were shocked when Speaker Gordon Dowding used the legislature's severe form of censure and said: Patrick Lucy McGeer, I name you."

McGeer said later the proceedings "had all the makings of a kangaroo court" and the government had engineered his ejection from the legislature to prevent him from attending a public accounts meeting this morning.

The incident had begun on a rather jovial note, shortly before the house was ready to adjourn at 11 p.m., when McGeer called Resources Minister Bob Williams "cowardly."

Committee chairman Hartley Dent demanded McGeer withdraw the unparliamentary expression and McGeer, egged on by fellow opposition members, withdrew the remark and instead said Williams is "spineless and weak-kneed."

When McGeer refused to withdraw those words without debating the issue and trying to find other more suitable words, Dent called in Dowding.

Dowding asked McGeer three times to withdraw his remarks unconditionally but the MLA kept asking the Speaker to define what he meant by unparliamentary expressions.

Almost before anyone in the house realized the seriousness of the situation, Dowding said he was sorry but had no choice but to name McGeer.

There were shouts of "Oh no" as McGeer picked up his books and walked out of the chamber.

Under the "naming" tradition the government was then required to present a motion of suspension and house leader Eileen Dailly quickly moved that McGeer be suspended until Thursday.

On a formal vote, Tory leader Scott Wallace supported the govenment in approving the suspension and only the Socreds voted against the motion.

There were no other Independents or Liberals in the house to support the ejected member.

Outside the chamber, McGeer said he had no intention of breaking the house rules

Indians' Rail Blockade Costs 120 Sawmill Jobs

VANCOUVER (CP) — An Indian blockade of British Columbia Railway tracks in northwestern B.C. has led to the closure of a sawmill and the loss of up to 120 jobs.

Conrad Pinette, president of Silvacan Resources Ltd., announced the closure Tuesday and described the five-week blockade by members of the Stuart-Trembleur band as "an irresponsible economic action."

The Indians set up the blocade April 28 north of Fort St. James, about 7 miles northwest of Prince George. The band is asking for land and money in return for use of Indian reserve land by the government-owned railway.

Pinette said there have been no trains into Silvacan operations on Takla Lake, 110 miles north of Fort St. James, since the blockade began.

He said the inventory of lumber, railway ties and residual wood chips has made it unrealistic to continue operations. In addition, fuel for heat and power for the mill, bunkhouses and houses is running low.

"The greatest concern to the company and its employees is that the Indians and the government appear unconcerned about the impact on communities isolated by the blockade and no apparent progress has been made toward settling the dispute," Pinette said.

The provincial government has said it will not negotiate land claims until the band removes the blockade.

Pinette said the mill employs about 80 persons. In addition, contract loggers working for Silvacan hire about 40.

Meanwhile, delegates to the annual convention of the B.C. Association of Non-Status Indians voted 129 to 50 Tuesday to join status Indians in rejecting all federal government funding and creating a single Indian political organization in B.C.

Announcement of results of the vote was cut short as delegates leaped to their feet for a standing ovation.

It was the climax of debate which started Monday in which 81 delegates either warned of the effects approval of the motion would have on health and education programs for Indian children, or of the effects disapproval would have in destroying chances for Indian unity and continued loss of freedom and dignity as a people.

Following the decision to reject funding for the provincial group — individual BCANSI locals can accept or reject funds although most indicated they would reject — delegates instructed the BCANSI executive to meet with the executive of the Union of B.C. Indian chiefs, which represents status Indians, and schedule a combined provincial assembly of the organizations before Sept. 30.

Many of those opposed to the funding motion were women involved in education and health projects. Doris Ronnenberg, candidate for the BCANSI executive, said women, children and the disabled would suffer from the move.

Public Enema No. 1

GLEN ELLYN, Ill. (UPI) — Champaign police served arrest warrants Tuesday on a man suspected of being the "enema bandit" who has terrorized women in the University of Illinois area for the past decade.

The suspect already was being held in the Dupage County Jail in connection with two robberies in Chicago's northwest suburbs.

Champaign Police Captain John Wilkinson said the latest warrants charged Michael H. Kenyon, 30, in connection with two incidents on May 3, when a man broke into apartments in Champaign and Urbana, robbed three women and gave them enemas.

Champaign police have searched for years for a man who enters apartments and dormitories in the University of Illinois area and forcibly administers enemas to female students.

MONTREAL (CP) — About 900 longshoremen walked out of a meeting today after telling their union executives they would return to work Thursday. OTTAWA (CP) — Federal government nurses have voted by a narrow margin to accept a unanimous conciliation report recommending average pay raises of 29 per cent in the first year and 10 per cent in the second year of a two-year contract.

10 CONTESTANTS SEEK MR. KAMLOOPS TITLE

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Men here will be able to compete for the title of Mr. Kamloops next month when a group of women hold a pageant to protest the Miss Kamloops contest.

"We're running it seriously and properly but with a sense of humor," Patricia Hughes, women's centre co-ordinator, said in an interview Tuesday.

She said the male contest was prompted by the group's feeling that the Miss Kamloops contest is sexist and exploits the female body.

"It's kind of sickening. We thought surely we're past this and wondered what would happen if we had one for men.

"It's okay for women to parade around in bikinis but men doing this kind of thing is another thing."

There are 10 contestants so far for the July 3 judging, a week after the Miss Kamloops contest.

Lebanese Sniping Breaks Ceasefire

Times News Services

BEIRUT — Random shooting by rooftop snipers and roaming machine gunners broke a ceasefire in several districts of this Lebanese capital today and brought the city its 15th day of civil strife.

The defence ministry said that an army vehicle came under heavy fire in the district of Chiyeh in south Beirut. A corporal riding in the vehicle was hit in the neck by a bullet and taken to hospital.

The shooting broke out after a leader of the mostly Christian National Liberal party was abducted and a Palestinian commando officer was wounded Tuesday afternoon.

Overnight gunfire and explosions gave some quarters of the city a sleepless night. Several major highways were blocked.

Police said the shooting was random and did not result from organized battles.

Beirut had just begun to show signs of returning to normal. Traffic jams developed as thousands of persons clogged shopping centres where some stores opened for the first time in a month.

Joint Palestinian-Lebanese patrols were formed to supervise a ceasefire and remove roadblocks. Premier-designate Rashid Karami urged citizens to "spread flowers where barricades once stood, quit barricades and head for the beaches, dance and kiss on streets."

Meanwhile Israel completed the thinning out of its forces and firepower along the Suez canal front today, a day before Egyptian President Anwar Sadat sails down the waterway to reopen it.

Labor Fed Urges $4 Minimum

BURNABY (CP) — The British Columbia Industrial Relations Board was urged Tueday to raise the provincial minimum wage to $4 an hour by the end of 1975 and to require that employees under 18 receive the same pay as adults.

The proposals were put forward by the B.C. Federation of Labor and several union representatives who appeared before the board at a hearing on minimum wage revision.

The last increase in the B.C. minimum wage went into effect a year ago, bringing the current level to $2.50 an hour for adults and $2.10 an hour for persons 17 and under.

Only Quebec, with minimum wages of $2.60 an hour for adults and $2.40 an hour for children, currently has a higher minimum wage than B.C., although the federal minimum wage and that of the Yukon Territory also will be increasing to $2.60 hourly next month.

The suggestion that employees under 18 should receive the same minimum as adults was endorsed by one employers' group at the hearings.

Don Bellamy, of the Canadian Restaurant Association, said the under 18 provision had been exploited. He said there should be provision for a lower than minimum rate only during a brief training period.

Airport Probe Confirmed

OTTAWA (CP) — RCMP Commissioner Maurice Nadon confirmed Tuesday that a drug investigation is under way at Montreal International Airport.

However, neither he nor Solicitor-General Warren Allmand would confirm or deny a Mountie's allegation that an internal RCMP report contains the names of 60 airport workers being paid off by drug smugglers.

"The release was premature," Commissioner Nadon said as he left Allmand's office late in the afternoon.

Earlier, questions were asked of Allmand in the Commons and more are expected today as the impact of the news story in Tuesday's Toronto Globe and Mail hits home.

Quoting Sgt. Jean Leduc of the RCMP drug squad in Montreal, the story alleges that powerful underworld gangs have corrupted airport workers with payoffs of thousands of dollars and are importing hashis by the ton.

Everything's Normal . . . It's June and Raining

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

June is the cruelest month in Victoria . . . it rains and rains and rains.

"People think of June as being a month of sunshine — but it isn't," Victoria's chief forecaster Allan McQuarrie said today.

"It's a month of cloud and drizzle. There's better weather in May and July."

Typically in May there will be occasional fairly hard rainfalls, followed by three days of excellent weather. In June the rain is lighter but the storm stays longer," McQuarrie said.

"Often there are weeks of drizzle just like we are getting today."

The cruelest part is that June is the month tourists begin to flow into the Victoria area in numbers.

And Victorians often select June as the month for an early camping trip. And outdoor sporting events are forever being rained out.

Over the past 30 years, Victoria has averaged 337 hours of sunshine during July. May on average has 260 hours. People expect June to get some amount between 260 and 337. In fact, June typically has only 256 hours of sunshine because of the frequent cloudy days.

Over the past 30 years, rainfall has been light in July at only .48 of an inch. May rainfall average .74 of an inch. The expectation is that June rainfall will be lower than .74 but a little higher than .48 of an inch.

Instead, it is higher than both, averaging .83 of an inch over the past 30 years.

The number is more significant when it is realized that rainfalls in June tend to be very light — but steady.

In short it is not ideal weather for camping and travel.

"We are not certain why this should be but we have some clues," McQuarrie said.

During the winter, winds come in from the northwest, bringing in storms, some wet, some dry. In the summer, the wind comes from the southwest, bringing in the Hawaiian high pressure ridge that produces hot, dry summer weather.

In June the wind is directly from the west. It moves directly across the Pacific from Japan and by the time it reaches here it is very, very wet.

Bobby Riggs

From World Champ to Sideshow Freak . . . and Now He Labels It 'Paradise'

It's sort of sad . . .

Paradise regained is only a myth; and behind the facade there is a little man who lives with laughter and derision.

When I was quite small I had my tennis heroes. Men like Jack Kramer, like Frank Sedgman and like Donald Budge. I confess that where I lived I didn't hear too much about Bobby Riggs. Yet he was truly one of the world's great players. He beat Budge, won three Wimbledon titles in the same year and went on to take more than 40 national championships in America.

Yet now, some 30 years after his days of triumph, how is Robert Larimore Riggs remembered?

They don't recall what a fine player he was or think of the clever tactics he had to use to overcome his slight stature and cut the physical giants of tennis down to his size.

No. He's the guy who blurted out his now famous sentiments that the world's leading women players weren't much good and that even an old has-been like him could wip them. And he proved it, to, by beating Australia's Margaret Court. But then unproved it all by losing hopelessly to American Billie Jean King. That's how they remember him.

That wasn't the end of Bobby Riggs, though. And it's a shame that it wasn't.

He continues to hustle his way around the world, playing women almost nobody has ever heard of and even men sometimes, if they're bad enough.

Right now, he's in Victoria, which isn't exactly the tennis capital of North America, to help promote Edgar and Caroline Rhomberg's Island Indoor Tennis centre, sign autographs at The Bay, and play a few local-standard players during tonight's Shamrocks lacrosse game.

Now that's sad enough, to sink to a level below which there would appear to be nothing except perhaps a tennis match with polar bears on the outskirts of Inuvik.

But his other exploits on a court that was supposed to have been designed for tennis have been so ridiculous they can't be called funny. Like playing all the burly members of an Aussie Rules football team at the same time on one court; like taking on a woman player while holding an open umbrella in one hand and dodging half a dozen chairs on his side of the net; and like playing another lady while being ankle-tied to a donkey!

In this way, a once-great tennis player has been reduced to a travelling vaudeville act. He's like the high-flying star of a circus who's been injured and is left with only the role of sideshow freak to play.

Yet people flock to see him. They come to gawk. And Bobby Riggs never lets them down.

He breezes into a press conference at the Island Indoor centre, has a quick handshake for the men and kisses for each of the women tennis officials and promptly hands everyone a Sugar Daddy candy stick.

"Don't give it away," he says. "Eat it. That's how I stay in shape," he quips, "I take 500 vitamin pills a day and six or seven Sugar Daddy candy sticks."

And the women coo and chuckle when he goes through his well-rehearsed patter and tells them the "number one favorite place for them has always been the bedroom and the number two is the kitchen."

"Their primary goal should be good homemaking and that should be enough," adds Bobby. "There's no better role, it seems to me, than a happily-married woman. I'm for that system and that concept and if that makes me a male chauvinist, then I guess that's what I am."

Yes, I guess it does. But it's all so corny that it's hard to believe that even he believes it.

Riggs has been married twice — one marriage lasted 13 years and the other 20 years — and now he is enjoying the "single life" and all the girls. The women, he says with no trace of modesty, love him and make a fuss of him wherever he goes.

"Since the catastrophe at the Astrodome (where he lost to Billie Jean King) life hasn't been too bad," grins Bobby. "I can still splash on some Hai Karate and go out on the town and live it up . . . and what would you rather be, the best woman tennis player in the world or a 57-year-old sex symbol?"

He insists his travelling comedy act that's only distantly related to tennis is "exciting and good fun with good money, new places and new faces." But how long can he hope to keep it up?

"As long as there are people who want to have Bobby Riggs come and have a fun day, I will consider it a great compliment and keep going," he says. "I've played serious tennis all my life since I was 12, amateur, pro, Davis Cup and senior, and now I've discovered fun in tennis."

"It's like a paradise land, this wide, wonderful world of women I'm discovering."

You have to admit, though, it's sort of sad . . .

Only Another Three Years Of Clatter!

Relative peace and quiet will prevail on downtown streets after the end of June, but the racket and traffic disruption will start again in September and continue in various parts of the city for at least another three years.

Victoria city council heard that not-so-cheering news Tuesday from city engineer John Sansom, when he gave a progress report on roadworks and assorted underground utility projects.

Sansom said for the months of July and August construction will cease on the jobs tackled by four separate utility bodies: the city itself, with its major Government Street Mall project and other miscellaneous paving or widening programs; the electricity and gas division of B.C. Hydro; and B.C. Tel.

But work will resume in the fall, and Hydro's task of installing new high-pressure gas mains will continue — spreading gradually outward from the city core to residential areas — for at least another three years.

Sansom said the dovetailing of all the works required by the four agencies, each with their own budgets, schedules and political pressures, is causing him considerable concern.

"Frankly, I'm rather worried about it," he told the caucus meeting. "Unless we have some restrictions on how these things are done, and agreement that the city acts as over-all co-ordinator to avoid unnecessary disruption, the city is going to get a lot of criticism that it doesn't deserve."

City solicitor Jakob de Villiers told the Times Tuesday that while B.C. Hydro as a Crown corporation is not bound by municipal bylaws or requirements, that does not apply to its gas operation in the city which still exists as a separate entity the Victoria Gas Company.

The company was incorporated by an act of 1860 passed by the legislative assembly of the colony of Vancouver Island, which states that any street construction or installation works carried out must be "under the superintendence and subject to the control of the surveyor-general of the colony or the proper officer having management of the streets" for the then-town of Victoria.

In other words, this legislation which has never been repealed makes the gas officials obliged to co-operate with the city engineer.

Legion Director For Jubilee

Royal Jubilee Hospital will be required to appoint a representative of the Royal Canadian Legion to its board of directors under legislation introduced in the house Tuesday.

Health Minister Dennis Cocke said he asked the hospital a year ago to appoint a Legion member to the board but his request had been ignored.

But Dr. A. C. Pickles, the hospital's executive director, said today Cocke's request had not been ignored.

There has been considerable correspondence on the subject and the addition of a board member required the amendment now before the house to be passed first, he said.

Cocke said Tuesday that a Legion member should be on the hospital board because of the transfer of the Veterans' Hospital (now known as Memorial Pavilion) to the Jubilee jurisdiction.

Pickles noted that half the current board members are veterans.

Tom Harris, chairman of the hospital facilities committee for the Vancouver Island division of the Legion, said today the hospital has provided excellent co-operation in dealing with any problems arising from the Veterans' Hospital integration.

'Administrative Havoc' Feared in Tax Sharing ★★★

New provincial legislation designed to spread the tax benefits from large industries among neighboring municipalities was criticized today by Victoria-area municipal leaders.

They claim the legislation will be an administrative nightmare to implement, could lead to intermunicipal bickering and will do nothing to ease the basic financial crisis facing all B.C. municipalities.

"I can see it causing administrative havoc," commented Victoria Ald. Mike Young.

"Something like 63 per cent of Victoria's tax base comes from industrial and commercial property, and to suggest that some of that money be siphoned off to surrounding municipalities is simply preposterous."

Acting Mayor Ald. Alf Hood expressed a similar view: "I think this could develop into a mish-mash of everyone trying to claim a portion of the revenue resulting from industry in a contiguous minicipality."

Under the amendments to the Municipal Act, introduced Tuesday by Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer, the cabinet may require in granting letters patent of supplementary letters patent to any municipality, that "the tax revenue from real property designated . . . shall be shared by the municipality with any other municipality on a basis provided" in the letters patent.

More General Application

Lorimer admitted the section was drafted to solve a specific problem involving Fort St. John and by Taylor municipality, site of Pacific Petroleum's refinery. Because most refinery employees lived in Fort St. John, that municipality wanted a share of the tax revenue from the industrial plant.

The minister said, however, that the legislation could have more general application. But he doubted that the cabinet would approve requests from Vancouver dormitory communities to share the wealth from Vancouver's industries.

Young expressed fears that any attempt to apply the provisions in a general way will create even more economic injustices than now exist in the financial structure of municipalities.

"Regardless of whether a municipality is large or small, industrial or commercial or both, bedroom, dormitory or whatever they are all in financial trouble right now, and simply juggling the figures by robbing Peter to pay Paul is not going to help the situation one little bit," he added.

Applying the proposed principle to the local scenes, he said the problems of Central Saanich municipality for example, cannot possibly be compared with the enormous problems facing Victoria which has to handle traffic from every other area, undertake sewage disposal and so on.

Hood said the amendments are another example of the NDP government's "ad hocery", passing blanket legislation to cope with one or two specific problems and thereby creating yet more problems.

Esquimalt Mayor Art Young said he doesn't agree with the intent of the legislation.

If one municipality is the home of employees of a large industry in a neighboring municipality, then the first municipality is getting paid for use of its services through the property taxes paid by those employees, he said.

Only if the municipality were providing actual services such as sewers to the industry outside its boundaries might it have a claim on tax revenues from that industry, said Young.

Young said the legislation might be seen as a step to force amalgamation of municipalities.

"I can't see the city sharing the tax revenue from, say, B.C. Forest Products," Noel said.

$20,000 for Cleanup

Victoria's bill for removing three months' accumulated garbage from the temporary Esquimalt Road heliport "dump" came to $20,000.

City engineer John Sansom informed aldermen Tuesday that regional health officials are pleased with the efficient way the mess was cleared up.

The job was carried out by contractor E. Nixon Ltd. in five days with front-end loaders and a fleet of 10 trucks.

Sansom said the city has now managed to deter those citizens who were continuing to deposit their refuse at the heliport site, despite the resumption of garbage pick-up service.

But he said a sharp increase has been noted in use of the city's garbage wharf at the foot of Herald Street, and much of the commercial and other garbage being dumped there originates from outside the city.

Sansom said he would have to study the present fee structure with a view to curbing such practices.

Draft Beer Supply Short As Effect of Strike Felt

At least a half dozen southern Vancouver Island hotels have been without draft beer for a week or more awaiting settlement of a 15-day-old strike at Molson's brewery in Vancouver.

Outlets normally supplied by Molson's — including five Greater Victoria pubs — have turned to bottled beer to serve their loyal customers while other houses not affected by the strike are enjoying extra business from those who prefer draft beer over bottled.

One downtown waiter said his beverage room was still busy. "Clientele usually stick to one place. As long as you're still open they'll still go there."

But he conceded the other nearby hotels who have uninterrupted supply of draft from other breweries are doing a brisker business.

Pubs affected by Molson's strike of about 200 workers include The Gorge, Red Lion, King's, Century Inn, and Prairie Inn, all in Victoria, and two others in Duncan and Nanaimo.

According to Liquor Administration Branch regulations hotels may not switch draft beer suppliers without formal notice and may not make a change more than twice in a single year.

Molson's employees went out May 20 after contract negotiations broke down. There is no sign of talks resuming.

Meanwhile, the 35-member staff at Uncle Ben's Tartan brewery have accepted settlement of new contract terms providing for $1.25 across the board hourly wage increase, a work day reduced by ½ an hour and double time instead of time and one-half for overtime.

Party Spat Splits Socreds

The ousting of Esquimalt Social Credit constituency president Shirley Wilde was the result of a spat over use of money raised by a wine and cheese party, Socred provincial president Grace McCarthy said today.

McCarthy was answering charges by Wilde that interference by McCarthy caused trouble in the Esquimalt group and led to her being deposed.

Wilde has announced she has joined the Conservative Party.

"Mrs. Wilde's allegations are just unfounded," McCarthy said.

"The general membership in two different meetings have taken a non-confidence vote in their president," she said.

The first vote was taken about a month ago, she said. Following this the rest of the constituency executive resigned so a new executive was elected on Monday.

New president is Lyman Young.

McCarthy said a split in the constituency executive arose over the proposed use of about $1,800 raised by a wine and cheese party to open a Socred storefront office in the constituency.

Wilde opposed the idea, she said but the rest of the executive supported it. Wilde was unavailable for comment today.

Jack Fry, a member of the Esquimalt constituency association, said the membership had voted 38-2 in favor of the storefront office at a meeting in Sooke earlier this spring.

WILDE

At the meeting a month ago, he said, Wilde supporters asked the membership to vote their confidence in Wilde by supporting her stand on the storefront office.

Wilde lost the vote 106-50, Fry said. Subsequently the chairman of the meeting asked for her resignation.

New Saanich Firehall

Saanich may have a new firehall under construction by the end of the year.

The firehall will replace the one at 5300 Hamsterly at Elk Lake.

Ald. Joe Bourque, chairman of the fire and civil defence committee, said Tuesday:

"An ideal location has been found on department of highways property on Viewmont Avenue near the Royal Oak overpass.

Chief Harold Gains said the property is about 1.6 acres.

"The deputy minister I was speaking to would like to have a rough draft of what kind of building we would be putting up before committing the province to the exchange," Gains reported.

Gains and the committee will view the site Friday morning and Gains was asked to draw up a rough draft of the building for council study.

Gains said later the relocation of the firehall from Hamsterly to Viewmont would provide a more central site for servicing the needs of that area of Saanich.

Gains told the committee that, in addition to the ambulance based at the main firehall on Vernon, another ambulance would be at the McKenzie Avenue firehall, hopefully by late August. Council, during its budget sessions, allowed for the hiring of eight additional firemen to cover the extended ambulance services.

Gains said the Emergency Health Services Commission had told him they were pleased to have an ambulance based in the fast-growing Gordon Head area and had no intention of taking over Saanich's ambulance services, at least until after the end of 1976.

PENSION BILL UP

OTTAWA (CP) — A long-promised government bill to pay an old-age pension to a pensioner's husband or wife between 60 and 65 was introduced Tuesday by Welfare Minister Marc Lalonde.

The bill to amend the Old Age Security Act is designed basically to assist couples now forced to live on one pension.

There now are 1.9 million persons receiving Old Age Security payments, which go to all persons 65 or older. This amendment would apply to about 85,000 spouses whose marriage partners are 65 or older.

BARRETT WILLING TO TAKE LOSS

6% Loans at B.C. Bank

By LINDA HUGHES
Times Staff

Six per cent loans and rates will be offered by British Columbia's new banking institution, Premier Barrett promised Tuesday.

The cheap loans will only be available to low-income people, he said, and the proposed Savings and Trust Corporation of B.C. will be willing to take a loss on those loans.

Low-price mortgages would likely be open to a wider range of people, he said.

His remarks came after the legislature gave second reading, approval in principle, to the bill to establish the new financial institution.

While all opposition members expressed concern about the ultimate role of the new bank, only the three Independent MLAs and two Liberal members voted against second reading. The Socreds and Tories support the bill in principle.

Approval of second reading was accompanied by a loud emotional response from cheering NDP members who stamped their feet and shouted "go, go, go."

Barrett said he could announce the six per cent interest rate for personal loans under $3,000 despite the fact the new corporation will not be in operation for another year.

The cheap loans will be patterned after low-cost loans offered by credit unions recently but, while the credit unions say they have not lost on the loans, the government bank would be prepared to do so, he said.

Under the credit union scheme, the income qualification for low-interest loans was $5,400 for a single person and $8,200 for a family.

If the credit unions agree to be the vehicle for the government's new bank, the corporation will probably have about 14 regional offices, said Barrett.

But if the credit unions do not want to participate in the scheme, the government will have to make new plans which will likely involve more offices and more expenses, he said.

During debate, Independent MLA Pat McGeer (Vancouver-Point Grey) said the bill is just a "hoax" and will not solve the financial problems facing B.C. and other parts of Canada.

The amount of money the government could inject into the system is minimal, he said, and the corporation will have no effect on the runaway inflation plaguing B.C.

McGeer said the legislation is designed to take over the credit unions of B.C. and gives the government the power to destroy any credit union which does not play along with the new bank.

Independent MLA Garde Gardom predicted, however, that in the case of a strike by the corporation's employees economic havoc would be created.

The Vancouver-Point Grey member suggested that individuals hired by the institution should have to accept binding arbitration.

"This will become the largest financial institution in B.C. and if it's closed up for two months the economy will be in severe straits."

The bill is yet another indication, he said, that the NDP is giving itself enormous powers over the province's economy.

Premier Barrett said the corporation is designed to work as a partner with the credit union network, and the government has no intentions of undermining credit unions.

"Credit unions can get vastly increased funds and the partnership will provide additional recognition to the stature of credit unions' reputation."

"Does that sound like a plot?"

Dowding Suspends McGeer

Independent MLA Pat McGeer (Vancouver — Point Grey) was thrown out of the legislature late Tuesday night and suspended from parliamentary activities until Thursday.

MLAs on both sides of the house were shocked when Speaker Gordon Dowding used the legislature's severe form of censure and said: "Patrick Luce McGeer, I name you."

McGeer said later the proceedings "had all the makings of a kangaroo court" and the government had engineered his ejection from the legislature to prevent him from attending a public accounts meeting this morning.

The incident had begun on a rather jovial note, shortly before the house was ready to adjourn at 11 p.m., when McGeer called Resources Minister Bob Williams "cowardly."

Committee chairman Hartley Dent demanded McGeer withdraw the unparliamentary expression and McGeer, egged on by fellow opposition members, withdrew the remark and instead said Williams is "spineless and weak-kneed."

When McGeer refused to withdraw those words without debating the issue and trying to find other more suitable words, Dent called in Dowding.

Dowding asked McGeer three times to withdraw his remarks unconditionally but the MLA kept asking the Speaker to define what he meant by unparliamentary expressions.

Almost before anyone in the house realized the seriousness of the situation, Dowding said he was sorry but had no choice but to name McGeer.

There were shouts of "Oh no" as McGeer picked up his books and walked out of the chamber.

Under the "naming" tradition the government was then required to present a motion of suspension and house leader Eileen Dailly quickly moved that McGeer be suspended until Thursday.

On a formal vote, Tory leader Scott Wallace supported the govenment in approving the suspension and only the Socreds voted against the motion.

There were no other Independents or Liberals in the house to support the ejected member.

Outside the chamber, McGeer said he had no intention of breaking the house rules

Indians' Rail Blockade Costs 120 Sawmill Jobs

VANCOUVER (CP) — An Indian blockade of British Columbia Railway tracks in northwestern B.C. has led to the closure of a sawmill and the loss of up to 120 jobs.

Conrad Pinette, president of Silvacan Resources Ltd., announced the closure Tuesday and described the five-week blockade by members of the Stuart-Trembleur band as "an irresponsible economic action."

The Indians set up the blockade April 28 north of Fort St. James, about 7 miles northwest of Prince George. The band is asking for land and money in return for use of Indian reserve land by the government-owned railway.

Pinette said there have been no trains into Silvacan operations on Takla Lake, 110 miles north of Fort St. James, since the blockade began.

He said the inventory of lumber, railway ties and residual wood chips has made it unrealistic to continue operations. In addition, fuel for heat and power for the mill, bunkhouses and houses is running low.

"The greatest concern to the company and its employees is that the Indians and the government appear unconcerned about the impact on communities isolated by the blockade and no apparent progress has been made toward settling the dispute," Pinette said.

The provincial government has said it will not negotiate land claims until the band removes the blockade.

Pinette said the mill employs about 80 persons. In addition, contract loggers working for Silvacan hire about 40.

Meanwhile, delegates to the annual convention of the B.C. Association of Non-Status Indians voted 129 to 50 Tuesday to join status Indians in rejecting all federal government funding and creating a single Indian political organization in B.C.

Announcement of results of the vote was cut short as delegates leaped to their feet for a standing ovation.

It was the climax of debate which started Monday in which 81 delegates either warned of the effects approval of the motion would have on health and education programs for Indian children, or of the effects disapproval would have in destroying chances for Indian unity and the continued loss of freedom and dignity as a people.

Following the decision to reject funding for the provincial group — individual BCANSI locals can accept or reject funds although most indicated they would reject — delegates instructed the BCANSI executive to meet with the executive of the Union of B.C. Indian chiefs, which represents status Indians, and schedule a combined provincial assembly of the organizations before Sept. 30.

Many of those opposed to the funding motion were women involved in education and health projects. Doris Ronnenberg, candidate for the BCANSI executive, said women, children and the disabled would suffer from the move.

Public Enema No. 1

GLEN ELLYN, Ill. (UPI) — Champaign police served arrest warrants Tuesday on a man suspected of being the "enema bandit" who has terrorized women in the University of Illinois area for the past decade.

The suspect already was being held in the Dupage County Jail in connection with two robberies in Chicago's northwest suburbs.

Champaign police captain John Wilkinson said the latest warrants charged Michael H. Kenyon, 30, in connection with two incidents on May 3, when a man broke into apartments in Champaign and Urbana, robbed three women and gave them enemas.

Champaign police have searched for years for a man who enters apartments and dormitories in the University of Illinois area and forcibly administers enemas to female students.

2 Charged in Death

MONTREAL (UPI — Two men have been charged with murder and other offences following the shooting death of a Montreal dectective in an armed robbery attempt. The two men were taken into custody by the partner of Det. Sgt. Gilles Beauvais, a 17-year veteran of the Montreal Police Force who died in Montreal General Hospital from chest wounds received in a shootout Tuesday night in suburban Ville Emard.

Dockers to Return

MONTREAL (CP) — About 900 longshoremen walked out of a meeting today after telling their union executives they would return to work Thursday. After several hours of heated discussion with union leaders, the men decided to forgo a scheduled secret ballot and voted by acclamation to end a walkout begun Friday.

Nurses Accept Pact

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal government nurses have voted by a narrow margin to accept a unanimous conciliation report recommending average pay raises of 29 per cent in the first year and 10 per cent in the second year of a two-year contract.

10 CONTESTANTS SEEK MR. KAMLOOPS TITLE

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Men here will be able to compete for the title of Mr. Kamloops next month when a group of women hold a pageant to protest the Miss Kamloops contest.

"We're running it seriously and properly but with a sense of humor," Patricia Hughes, women's centre co-ordinator, said in an interview Tuesday.

She said the male contest was prompted by the group's feeling that the Miss Kamloops contest is sexist and exploits the female body.

"Its kind of sickening. We thought surely we're past this and wondered what would happen if we had one for men.

"It's okay for women to parade around in bikinis but men doing this kind of thing is another thing."

There are 10 contestants so far for the July 3 judging, a week after the Miss Kamloops contest.

Lebanese Sniping Breaks Ceasefire

Times News Services

BEIRUT — Random shooting by rooftop snipers and roaming machine gunners broke a ceasefire in several districts of this Lebanese capital today and brought the city its 15th day of civil strife.

The defence ministry said that an army vehicle came under heavy fire in the district of Chiyeh in south Beirut. A corporal riding in the vehicle was hit in the neck by a bullet and taken to hospital.

The shooting broke out after a leader of the mostly Christian National Liberal party was abducted and a Palestinian commando officer was wounded Tuesday afternoon.

Overnight gunfire and explosions gave some quarters of the city a sleepless night. Several major highways were blocked.

Police said the shooting was random and did not result from organized battles.

Beirut had just begun to show signs of returning to normal. Traffic jams developed as thousands of persons clogged shopping centres where some stores opened for the first time in a month.

Joint Palestinian-Lebanese patrols were formed to supervise a ceasefire and remove roadblocks. Premier-designate Rashid Karami urged citizens to "spread flowers where barricades once stood, quit barricades and head for the beaches, dance and kiss on streets."

Meanwhile Israel completed the thinning out of its forces and firepower along the Suez canal front today, a day before Egyptian President Anwar Sadat sails down the waterway to reopen it.

Labor Fed Urges $4 Minimum

BURNABY (CP) — The British Columbia Industrial Relations Board was urged Tueday to raise the provincial minimum wage to $4 an hour by the end of 1975 and to require that employees under 18 receive the same pay as adults.

The proposals were put forward by the B.C. Federation of Labor and several union representatives who appeared before the board at a hearing on minimum wage revision.

The last increase in the B.C. minimum wage went into effect a year ago, bringing the current level to $2.50 an hour for adults and $2.10 an hour for persons 17 and under.

Only Quebec, with minimum wages of $2.60 an hour for adults and $2.40 an hour for children, currently has a higher minimum wage than B.C., although the federal minimum wage and that of the Yukon Territory also will be increasing to $2.60 hourly next month.

The suggestion that employees under 18 should receive the same minimum as adults was endorsed by one employers' group at the hearings.

Don Bellamy, of the Canadian Restaurant Association, said the under 18 provision had been exploited. He said there should be provision for a lower than minimum rate only during a brief training period.

Airport Probe Confirmed

OTTAWA (CP) — RCMP Commissioner Maurice Nadon confirmed Tuesday that a drug investigation is under way at Montreal International Airport.

However, neither he nor Solicitor-General Warren Allmand would confirm or deny a Mountie's allegation that an internal RCMP report contains the names of 60 airport workers being paid off by drug smugglers.

"The release was premature," Commissioner Nadon said as he left Allmand's office late in the afternoon.

Earlier, questions were asked of Allmand in the Commons and more are expected today as the impact of the news story in Tuesday's Toronto Globe and Mail hits home.

Quoting Sgt. Jean Leduc of the RCMP drug squad in Montreal, the story alleges that powerful underworld gangs have corrupted airport workers with payoffs of thousands of dollars and are importing hashish by the ton.

Everything's Normal . . . It's June and Raining

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

June is the cruelest month in Victoria . . . it rains and rains and rains.

"People think of June as being a month of sunshine — but it isn't," Victoria's chief forecaster Allan McQuarrie said today.

"It's a month of cloud and drizzle. There's better weather in May and July."

Typically in May there will be occasional fairly hard rainfalls, followed by three days of excellent weather. In June the rain is lighter but the storm stays longer," McQuarrie said.

"Often there are weeks of drizzle just like we are getting today."

The cruelest part is that June is the month tourists begin to flow into the Victoria area in numbers.

And Victorians often select June as the month for an early camping trip. And outdoor sporting events are forever being rained out.

Over the past 30 years, Victoria has averaged 337 hours of sunshine during July. May on average has 260 hours. People expect June to get some amount between 260 and 337. In fact, June typically has only 256 hours of sunshine because of the frequent cloudy days.

Over the past 30 years, rainfall has been light in July at only .48 of an inch. May rainfall average .74 of an inch. The expectation is that June rainfall will be lower than .74 but a little higher than .48 of an inch.

Instead, it is higher than both, averaging .83 of an inch over the past 30 years.

The number is more significant when it is realized that rainfalls in June tend to be very light — but steady.

In short it is not ideal weather for camping and travel.

"We are not certain why this should be but we have some clues," McQuarrie said.

During the winter, winds come in from the northwest, bringing in storms, some wet, some dry. In the summer, the wind comes from the southwest, bringing in the Hawaiian high pressure ridge that produces hot, dry summer weather.

In June the wind is directly from the west. It moves directly across the Pacific from Japan and by the time it reaches here it is very, very wet.

Perhaps you've heard about the Koffler Academy, a school which has been operating since 1971 by Koffler Stores Limited for Shoppers Drug Mart employees. Courses are designed to encompass all levels of expertise required by pharmacists, dispensary assistants, cosmeticians, merchandise managers, cashiers, clerks and other personnel.

Besides increasing their knowledge on how to meet consumer needs, these programs provide Shoppers Drug Mart personnel with a greater opportunity to learn on-the-job and to encourage personal growth.

And, do you know about the consumer programs that Shoppers Drug Mart stores have initiated throughout Canada?

One part of the program includes a Consumer Health Education Centre in each store which carries information on a variety of health oriented subjects including family planning, cancer detection, drug abuse and alcoholism and many others.

Also included in the program are the Shoppers Drug Mart Consumer Spokesmen-pharmacists who are available to speak to local groups on subjects related to drugs, drug abuse, self medication, senior citizen drug benefit programs and other popular topics.

The Money Saver, which you are reading now, is delivered directly to most homes across Canada and available in all Shoppers Drug Mart stores. This publication is a way of passing on savings and special consumer information to you.

To help you communicate with your pharmacist and to encourage dialogue, some Shoppers Drug Mart stores across Canada feature a new type of prescription dispensary counter to establish eye-to-eye communication with customers, thereby opening lines of discussion on health and drugs.

Next time you're in a Shoppers Drug Mart store, make sure you enjoy all the savings and special consumer help your local Shoppers Drug Mart store offers you. Are you a FIT Father?

by Peter R. Elson, Physical Fitness Consultant.

This being the month that gives credit to the existence of fathers, I have decided to do my own bit and write about the importance of fitness for fathers.

Our first impression is that fathers are the physically active segment of the population. They are the ones that play the periodic game of hockey, or spend many hours at the golf club, and are expected to initiate the children of the family in their sport pursuits.

Fathers are often totally oblivious of the values of physical fitness, and the importance of their example in passing on the benefits of physical fitness to their children. The case of a father either being completely inactive or doing too much of the wrong kind of exercise, unfortunately for both them and their children is the rule rather than the exception.

Children copy. They copy our bad habits as well as our good ones. There are a lot of children who feel that the only alternative to participating in organized sport is to watch it like Daddy does. In fact, recent studies have shown that the children of physically active parents are significantly fitter than the children of sedentary ones.

Being a physically fit parent will do more for the fitness of your children than taking them to a hockey rink ever will. It takes a lot of both mental and physical energy to be an active father, and regular physical activity of the right kind will give you just that kind of energy.

Be a good fitness example for your children, and remember - the fitness of your children doesn't start with them, it starts with you!

THE SHOPPERS DRUG MART HISTORY

Koffler Stores Limited was created in June 1968 by the merger of Koffler organization's 22 pharmacies with the 29 store chain of Plaza Drugs. Koffler Drugs was founded in 1921 by the late Leon Koffler who operated two of the city's leading pharmacies for many years. Plaza Drugs operated pharmacies under a group of partners, six of whom are members of the Koffler management team.

With the merger came the opportunity to refine further the new "supermarket" concept in drug retailing -- mass merchandising, self-service and low mark-up.

In 1969 the Company acquired Embassy Cleaners, a chain of dry cleaning depots in the Toronto area, which business has steadily progressed and grown.

The next major step taken by the company was the acquisition in 1971 of the 87-store Western Canadian drug chain, Cunningham Drug Stores Limited.

In the fall of 1972, Koffler Stores joined with Steinberg's Limited of Montreal to form a company called Pharmaprix Limitee for the purpose of joint development of drug store locations for Quebec pharmacists and the rendering of services to them.

Next, in June, 1974, 26 pharmacies were acquired from Lord's Super Value Pharmacies Limited throughout the Maritimes and Ontario. Last November 21st, newly-converted stores were simultaneously re-opened as Shoppers Drug Mart stores.

In 1974, the first Shoppers Drug Mart store in the United States opened in Palm Beach Gardens, Florida.

To date over 7 million prescriptions are dispensed annually by Shoppers Drug Mart pharmacists across Canada.

The Shoppers Drug Mart concept permits independent pharmacists to be in business for themselves and provides definite consumer benefits to drug store shoppers.

In a very competitive business environment, the Shoppers Drug Mart Associate provides leadership which gives consumers the opportunity to shop in a friendly drug store where we care about their health and their budgets.

"My store is definitely an extension of my personality. It gives me a good feeling when my customers tell me my store is an economical and exciting place to shop.

"I was a drug store manager before the Shoppers Drug Mart concept was introduced into British Columbia in 1971. I've seen some wonderful changes in drugstore shopping out here. I like when my customers call me Cliff -- they make me so pleased that I'm part of the health services team in Terrace. I'm proud to be a Shoppers Drug Mart Associate."

THE MERCHANDISE MANAGER-

What's so special to Jim McWilliams about being a Merchandising Manager at a Shoppers Drug Mart store?

Jim, who calls himself a front store manager, says his job involves purchasing, stock control, meeting sales representatives from different companies, and his favourite of all, assisting customers in every possible way.

"I enjoy trying to get the right answer for the customer no matter how much I have to go out of my way. Personal contact is so important. My main concern is that the consumer is happy and will return to the store. Listening to the customer and helping him select the right products or solve his problem is one of the most important facets to being a Merchandise Manager."

Jim has been with the Shoppers Drug Mart team at Fairview Mall in Toronto for five years. He started his career in 1964, so he has 11 years of merchandising experience under his belt.

"The phenomenal growth of the company has made my job very exciting," says Jim. "A Merchandise Manager has to work at his job, be able to put in time and effort and roll with the season. I read the latest merchandising magazines to constantly learn all the new and latest techniques in my field. I also regularly attend the Shoppers Drug Mart training school for Merchandise Managers."

Jim says all store personnel co-operate -- and the more co-operation, the more everyone gains from his job.

"We all feel responsible for our store's growth. A busy store creates high tension, so we all have to be on our toes to help our customers."

I worked for one year in administration in our central office in Toronto," continues Jim, "but I missed the customers, working in the store -- the day-to-day challenge of helping customers and running my front store operation, so I came to Fairview when it opened, and, this is the place for me".
